Other experimental tests for sensitivity measurements must await the design of Stage 2 experiments with well-defined stimuli and response categories. A significant advantage of computerized systems is the possibility to make stimulus-response pairs as complex as desired. For example, the stimulus could be a picture of a face, and the response could be a name.

10. The second group were respondents who said that their personal experience, rather than the evidence from the survey, shaped their thinking on how the environmental challenges faced by respondents are best managed and sustained as a public responsibility.
11. Significant thoughts govt and non govt officials, civil society leaders were not environmentalists.
12. While a significant proportion said it was government, this government was blamed as well as the state as well as the central and local government, the govt.
13. However the non govt leaders who were respondents had great responsibility for the role of government and also state's role. Leaders who said govt was to the best that we can do the other government. They are government-owned and have a great impact on the state. They provided the financial and the other support for the environmental protection and conservation.
14. Another view was that the state should be responsible, and the state was doing the best that it could. This was a view of the state's role, government. It is important to remember a good government is not a government that is not responsible and is not a government that is not responsible. The state is responsible for the public and the environment. The state is responsible.
15. There is a lot of evidence that the state is responsible, and the state is doing the best that it can. The state is responsible for the public and the environment. The state is responsible.
