Citizenship A Reality Far From Ideal:

Citizenship, Civil Society and Development Tiina Kontinen, Henri Onodera, 2016-04-14 The book investigates the intersection of citizenship civil society and development in today's global world. The multi-disciplinary collection considers the notion of citizenship in connection with the neoliberal development agendas: participation, security, discourses and legal environments. The contributions analyse the development citizenship nexus grounded in empirical work in African, Latin American, European and global contexts. The book opens exciting avenues to reflect on the notion of citizenship and explores the following pertinent questions: Does citizenship matter for development research? Do international development policy and practice promote certain normative registers for how people should make sense of their social relations and in particular how they relate to public authorities? What are their responses? Contributors from various academic backgrounds such as anthropology, law and political science affirm the importance of citizenship for the study of contemporary development processes. Chapters provide empirical analysis of the processes of water privatization in Ghana, the promulgation of new NGO Law in Ethiopia, environmental politics in former Yugoslavia and the global interconnections between the Arab Spring and the Occupy Wall Street movement. The book is relevant for students and scholars of political science and development studies as well as development practitioners globally. This book was published as a special issue of the Journal of Civil Society.

Citizenship Kalu Kalu, 2016-09-13 In stark contrast to previous scholarship about citizenship as a construct, this groundbreaking book covers the full spectrum of literature on citizenship theory, including the state and structure of identity, the individual and the public and the enduring issues of civic engagement and collective discourse. It examines some of the complex challenges faced by citizens and policy makers and explores the existing procedural and institutional mechanisms that undermine democratic political accountability as well as its legitimation. Drawing from classical conceptions of citizenship in the early Greco-Roman eras to the more contemporary critical social theory and postmodernist contentions, the work casts a wide net that covers complex issues including rights and obligation, the doctrine of state sovereignty and authority, equality, the principle of majority rule, citizen participation in governance, public versus self-interest, ideas of justice, immigration and cultural identity, global citizenship and the evolution of hybrid communities that challenge traditional notions of state citizenship identity. With meticulous detail and powerful analysis, author Kalu N. Kalu unceasingly places citizenship as the central thesis of this project, illuminating its intellectual richness on the one hand and demonstrating the ongoing challenges in both conceptualization and practice on the other.
