Europe Marc Morjé Howard, 2009-09-07 In this book Howard addresses immigrant integration one of the most critical challenges facing European countries the resolution of which will in large part depend on how foreigners can become citizens Howard's research shows that despite remarkable convergence in their economic judicial and social policies the countries of the European Union still maintain very different definitions of citizenship Based on an innovative measure of national citizenship policies the book accounts for both historical variation and contemporary change Howard's historical explanation highlights the legacies of colonialism and early democratization which unintentionally created relatively inclusive citizenship regimes Howard's argument focuses on the politics of citizenship showing in particular how anti immigrant public opinion when activated politically usually by far right movements or public referenda can block the liberalizing tendencies of political elites Overall the book shows the far reaching implications of this growing and volatile issue
