gave Arsinoë in marriage to a certain man of his court named Lagos. A very short time after the marriage Ptolemy was born. Philip treated the child with the same consideration and favor that he had evinced toward the mother. The boy was called the son of Lagos but his position in the royal court of Macedon was as high and honorable and the attentions which he received were as great as he could have expected to enjoy if he had been in reality a son of the king. As he grew up he attained to official stations of considerable responsibility and power. In the course of time a certain transaction occurred by means of which Ptolemy involved himself in serious difficulty with Philip though by the same means he made Alexander very strongly his friend. There was a province of the Persian empire called Caria situated in the southwestern part of Asia Minor. The governor of this province had offered his daughter to Philip as the wife of one of his sons named Aridus, the half brother of Alexander. Alexander's mother who was not the mother of Aridus was jealous of this proposed marriage. She thought that it was part of a scheme for bringing Aridus forward into public notice and finally making him the heir to Philip's throne whereas she was very earnest that this splendid inheritance should be reserved for her own son. Accordingly she proposed to Alexander that they should send a secret embassy to the Persian governor and represent to him that it would be much better both for him and for his daughter that she should have Alexander instead of Aridus for a husband and induce him if possible to demand of Philip that he should make the change.

Cleopatra : the Queen of Egypt Jacob Abbott, Arthur B. Weigall, 2024-04-20 Of all the beautiful women of history none has left us such convincing proofs of her charms as Cleopatra for the tide of Rome's destiny and therefore that of the world turned aside because of her beauty. This book deals with the history and character of Cleopatra. Cleopatra was by birth an Egyptian by ancestry and descent she was a Greek. Thus while Alexandria and the Delta of the Nile formed the scene of the most important events and incidents of her history it was the blood of Macedon which flowed in her veins. Her character and action are marked by the genius, the courage, the originality and the impulsiveness pertaining to the stock from which she sprung. The events of her history on the other hand and the peculiar character of her adventures, her sufferings and her sins were determined by the circumstances with which she was surrounded and the influences which were brought to bear upon her in the soft and voluptuous clime where the scenes of her early life were laid.
