Climbers Three Dennis Wynne Jones:

Climbers Three Dennis Wynne-Jones, 2015-12-07 When the Wells sisters from the tiny English hamlet of Denton near Ilkley Yorkshire took up mountaineering at the start of the twentieth century little did they know that they were to become pioneers in women's climbing in the UK. At the time of the growing strength of the Women's Suffragette movement women only mountaineering began to increase in popularity. This story describes the adventures of Paddy Trilby and Biddy Wells through Wharfedale, the Lake District, North Wales, Scotland, and the Alps, including the first all-female traverse of the Skye ridge, the first female descent of Gaping Ghyll pothole, and the first female to successfully climb all the Scottish Munros. There were links in the lives of the three sisters to the Church of St John in Ben Rhydding, to the local ladies Hockey Club, to the founding of England's first women-only climbing club, to Bradford Diocesan Council meetings, to innovative ideas in Special Needs education in Bradford, to local amateur operatic and Gilbert and Sullivan Societies, and to many leading and famous British mountaineers of the period. This story will be of interest to the local people in Ilkley and Wharfedale, to mountaineers around the world, and to all those interested in discovering more about some remarkable independently minded women to whom we should all be in awe.
