For The Love of Bombs Peder Anker, 2025-01-14 Did you know that the uranium used to bomb the citizens of Hiroshima was mined at a forbidden site known as the money place by First Nation people in northern Canada Or have you heard about the environmental damage and social upheavals at the Atomic City of Oak Ridge And how about the bikini swimwear Did you know that the gaze on a woman's belly button was that of military men carrying out atomic bombardments on the Bikini Atoll while fetishising sex bombs and atomic bombshells. And how about the poor Pacific Islanders who got their atolls blown to pieces. Have you heard about the colonial history of violence and oppression of those whose only aspiration was to live in peace with their coconut islands. And everyone is talking about climate change these days. Did you know that the debate emerged as a reaction to the fear of ordinary citizens wondering if atomic bombs would blow up the entire sky. If some of this was news to you, it might have to do with how the story of atomic bombs has been told. The truism that history is written by its winners is very much the case in the literature about how the bomb came about with numerous apologetic books most often written by U.S. scholars. These are usually cast as stories of the tormented souls of scientists who made a Faustian bargain with the military in pursuit of atomic knowledge. The physicist Robert Oppenheimer, the nuke's father, is repeatedly centre stage as in the case of the recent film about him. These are elitist stories that more often than not ignore the suffering and violence of the bomb to laypeople in general and to marginalised groups in particular. This book offers alternative perspectives.

The Genocide Continues Karen Stote, 2025-10-28T00:00:00Z. Indigenous Peoples in Canada have experienced coerced sterilization under eugenics legislation since the 1930s and the violence has never stopped even though eugenics fell into disrepute. In The Genocide Continues, Karen Stote traces the historical, political, economic and policy context informing the coerced sterilization of Indigenous women from 1970 onward. She shows how a powerful idea paved the way for the expanded violations of Indigenous people's bodies and futures. That idea was population control, a concern with who occupied land and how resources were distributed, and it was a central thread guiding public health interventions from eugenics to family planning. The Genocide Continues offers new insights to show how federal, provincial and corporate activities intersected to criminalize and regulate Indigenous reproduction. Saskatchewan, which first established family planning policies in the 1970s and is now the province with the highest number of Indigenous women coming forward with experiences of coerced sterilization, is Stote's case study to demonstrate why family planning activities consistently targeted Indigenous women. Stote weaves compelling archival evidence with principled storytelling to connect violence against Indigenous bodies to violence against Indigenous lands. Unless and until colonialism, extractivism and dispossession are addressed, a genocide against Indigenous peoples will continue.

I Will Live for Both of Us Joan Scottie, Warren Bernauer, Jack Hicks, 2022-11-11. Born at a traditional Inuit camp in what is now Nunavut, Joan Scottie has spent decades protecting the Inuit hunting way of life, most famously with her long battle against the uranium mining industry.
