Lidenbrock and his nephew Axel find a coded note written in runic script along with the name of a 16th century Icelandic alchemist Arne Saknussemm. Lidenbrock departs for Iceland immediately taking the reluctant Axel with him. After a swift trip via Kiel and Copenhagen they arrive in Reykjavík. There they hire as their guide the Icelandic hunter Hans Bjelke, a Danish speaking eiderduck hunter, then travel overland to the base of Snæfellsjökull. In late June they reach the volcano and set off into the bowels of the earth encountering many dangers and strange phenomena. After taking a wrong turn they run short of water and Axel nearly perishes but Hans saves them all by tapping into a subterranean river which shoots out a stream of water that Lidenbrock and Axel name the Hansbach in the guide's honor. Following the course of the Hansbach the explorers descend many miles and reach an underground world. The travelers build a raft out of semipetrified wood and set sail. While at sea they encounter prehistoric fish and giant marine reptiles from the age of dinosaurs. A lightning storm threatens to destroy the raft and its passengers but instead throws them onto the site of an enormous fossil graveyard including bones from the pterodactyl, Megatherium and mastodon and the preserved body of a man.
