Development And Displacement:

Development-Induced Displacement and Resettlement Irge Satiroglu, Narae Choi, 2015-04-10 Every year millions of people are displaced from their homes livelihoods and communities due to land based development projects There is no limit to what can be called a development project They can range from small scale infrastructure or mining projects to mega hydropower plants can be public or private well planned or rushed into Knowledge of development induced displacement and resettlement DIDR remains limited even after decades of experience and research Many questions are yet unanswered What is success in resettlement Is development without displacement possible or can resettlement be developmental Is there a global safeguard policy or do we need an international right not to be displaced This book revisits what we think we know about DIDR Starting with case studies that challenge some of the most widespread preconceptions it goes on to discuss the ethical aspects of DIDR The book assesses the current laws policies and rights governing the sector and provides a glimpse of how the displaced people defend themselves in the absence of effective governance and safeguard mechanisms This book is a valuable resource for students and researchers in development studies population and development and migration and development Development-induced Displacement Chris de Wet, 2005-11-01 Some ten million people worldwide are displaced or resettled every year due to development projects such as the construction of dams irrigation schemes urban development transport conservation or mining projects The results have usually been very negative for most of those people who have to move as well as for other people in the area such as host populations People are often left socially and institutionally disrupted and economically worse off with the environment also suffering as a result of the introduction of infrastructure and increased crowding in the areas to which people had to move The contributors to this volume argue that there is a complexity and a tension inherent in trying to reconcile enforced displacement of people with the subsequent creation of a socio economically viable and sustainable environment Only when these are squarely confronted will it be possible to adequately deal with the problems and to improve resettlement policies

Development-Induced Displacement and Resettlement in Bangladesh Mohammad Zaman, Hafiza Khatun, 2019 A very first for Bangladesh this edited book examines the complex issues of development induced displacement and resettlement using case studies with good practice examples from a wide range of ongoing projects The authors who are largely practitioners in the field of resettlement studies are well known in the country and internationally for their expert knowledge The book establishes a baseline for further research on resettlement and development in Bangladesh It is rich in well presented case studies replete with evidence based strategies to help prevent impoverishment amongst those displaced by development projects The chapters in this collection address emerging issues and approaches to resettlement and thus have enriched the literature in an era of rapid economic development and change Thus the book will remain as a valuable resource and reference or teaching aid in academic and development circles Country Frameworks for Development Displacement and Resettlement

Susanna Price, Jane Singer, 2019-03-28 The problem of escalating population displacement demands global attention and country coordination. This book investigates the particular issue of development induced displacement whereby land is seized or restricted by the state for the purposes of development projects. Those displaced by these schemes often risk losses to their homes, livelihoods, food security and socio-cultural support for which they are rarely fully compensated. Bringing together 22 specialist researchers and practitioners from across the globe, this book provides a much needed independent analysis of country frameworks for development induced displacement spanning Asia, Africa, Central and South America. As global competition for land increases, public and private sector lenders are lightening their social safeguards, shifting the oversight for protecting the displaced to national law and regulations. This raises a central question: Do countries have effective ways of addressing the risks and lost opportunities for their people who are displaced? While many countries remain impervious to the problem, the book also shines a light on the few who are pioneering new legislation and strategies intended to address questions such as: should the social costs to those displaced help determine whether a project meets the public interest and merits financing? Does the modern state need powers of eminent domain? How can country laws, systems, institutions and negotiations be reformed to protect citizens better against disempowering public and private sector development displacement? This book will interest those working on forced and voluntary migration, property and expropriation, law, human rights, environmental and social impact assessment, internal and refugee displacement, from conflicts, environment change, disasters and development.

Displacement and Resettlement in India Hari

Mathur, 2013-07-18 In the past ten years or so, displacement by development projects has gone on almost untamed under the globalization pressures to meet the demand for land from local and increasingly foreign investors. Focusing on India, this book looks at the complex issue of resettling people who are displaced for the sake of development. The book discusses how the affected farming communities are fiercely opposing the development projects that often leave them worse off than before and how this conflict is a matter of serious concern for the planners as it could discourage potential capital inflows and put India's growth trajectory into jeopardy. It analyses the challenge of protecting the interests of farmers and at the same time ensuring that these issues do not hinder the path of development. The book goes on to highlight the emerging approaches to resettlement that promise a more equitable development outcome. A timely analysis of displacement and resettlement, this book has an appeal beyond South Asian Studies alone. It is of interest to policy makers, planners, administrators and scholars in the field of resettlement and development studies.

Understanding Impoverishment Chris McDowell, 1996

Infrastructure development projects are set to continue into the next century as developing country governments seek to manage population growth, urbanization and industrialization. The contributions in this volume raise many questions about development and progress in the late twentieth century. What is revealed are the enormous problems and disastrous affects which continue to accompany displacement operations in many countries which raise the ever more urgent question of whether the benefits of infrastructure development justify or outweigh the pain of the radical disruption of peoples lives exacerbated by the fact that with some notable exceptions there has been a lack of official recognition on the part of governments and international agencies that development induced displacement is a problem at all This important volume addresses the issues and shows just how serious the situation is Development-induced Displacement and Human Rights in Africa Romola Adeola,2020-09-21 Within the context of the 2009 Kampala Convention this book examines how a balance can be struck between the imperative of development projects and the rights of persons likely to be displaced in Africa Following independence many African states embarked on large scale development projects such as dams urban renewal and extraction of natural resources and have had to grapple with how to protect displaced communities while implementing development projects These projects were considered a panacea for Africa s development and the economic interests of the majority were often considered over and above the interests of the minority of people who were displaced by these projects This book examines how a balance can be struck between the imperative of development and the rights of displaced persons within the context of the African Union Convention on the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa the Kampala Convention Romola Adeola analyses the obligations that are placed on African states by the Kampala Convention in the context of development induced displacement This book will be of interest to scholars of human rights law forced migration African Studies and development Development-Induced Displacement and Resettlement Bogumil Terminski,2014-05-01 This book explores the issue of development induced resettlement with a particular emphasis on the humanitarian legal and social aspects of this problem Today so called development induced displacement and resettlement DIDR is one of the dominant causes of internal spatial mobility worldwide Each year over 15 million people are forced to abandon their homes to make space for economic development infrastructure The construction of dams and irrigation projects the expansion of communication networks urbanization and re urbanization the extraction and transportation of mineral resources forced evictions in urban areas and population redistribution schemes count among the many possible causes Terminski aims to present the issue of development caused displacement as a highly diverse global social problem occurring in all regions of the world As a human rights issue it poses a challenge to public international law and to institutions providing humanitarian assistance A significant part of this book is devoted to the current dynamics of development caused resettlement in Europe which has been neglected in the academic literature so far The Development Dilemma S. Parasuraman,2016-07-27 The social economic and political contexts in which development projects in India are implemented and consequences to people displaced by such projects are analyzed in this book Development displacement resettlement and rehabilitation processes related to three major reservoir bases irrigation and power projects and three major industrial projects are studied The role of the State international agencies and the private industrial sector in promoting development and managing rehabilitation of the displaced people is assessed and the author proposes a framework for a comprehensive policy on development displacement and rehabilitation

Development-induced Displacement, Rehabilitation and Resettlement in India Sakarama Somayaji, Smrithi Talwar, 2011-03-31 Compulsory land acquisition and involuntary displacement of communities for a larger public purpose captures the tension of development in the modern state with the need to balance the interests of the majority while protecting the rights of the minority In India informal estimates of involuntary resettlement are estimated to be around 50 million people over the last five decades and three fourths of those displaced still face an uncertain future Growing public concern over the long term consequences of this has led to greater scrutiny of the rehabilitation and resettlement process particularly for large development projects This book examines a number of new policy formulations put in place at both the central and state levels looking at land acquisition procedures and norms for rehabilitation and resettlement of communities The book combines a theoretical analysis of the proposed regulatory framework with detailed case studies that examine the application of these norms in specific geographic contexts across the country It brings together contributory analysis by some of the country s most engaged administrators academics and activists in the field and is a useful contribution to Development Studies
