Contesting Cultural Rhetorics Public Discourse And Education 1890 1900:

Contesting Cultural Rhetorics Margaret J. Marshall, 2025-10-01 Contesting Cultural Rhetorics is a groundbreaking and original study that demonstrates how education is viewed as a contested term and a set of contested practices in American culture because it is inevitably linked to highly contested value laden terms An examination of the public discourse of education not only reveals the ideologies and conceptions embedded in educative acts and institutions but also provides a means of examining how education itself functions in American culture as a site of contest between ideologies values and the constitution of individual and nation Margaret J Marshall s analysis employs a range of contemporary theorists from Bakhtin to Foucault and draws on a number of disciplinary perspectives including law history and ethnography where scholars have been examining discursive practices and where rhetoric is understood to be a means of examining cultural conceptions and embedded ideologies Through these lenses she examines four influential and popular texts of the 1890s that serve to illuminate current public debates on education Joseph Mayer Rice s articles in Forum a well respected magazine Matthew Arnold s introduction to a government report W E B Du Bois s A Negro Schoolmaster in the New South and Jane Addams s A Function of the Social Settlement Neither a history of education nor a typical literary analysis of the texts in question this book considers the rhetorical stance of authors the constitution of audience and subject and the use of references and narratives as devices of authority Taken together these texts reveal the complicated public discussion of education in the 1890s a period of transformation in culture schooling and the organization of knowledge Moreover they reveal the rhetorical structure of many of the questions Americans ask about education today who should be educated by whom for what purposes using what methods or materials What of the past should we pass on to the future and how Contesting Cultural Rhetorics will be useful to readers interested in the history of education and nineteenth century popular culture as well as those involved in current debates on education and public policy

Response to Reform Margaret Marshall, 2003-11-25 Response to Reform Composition and the Professionalization of Teaching critiques the politics of labor and gender biases inherent in the composition workplace that prevent literacy teachers from attaining professional status and respect Scrutinizing the relationship between scholarship and teaching Margaret J Marshall calls for a reconceptualization of what it means to prepare for and enter the field of composition instruction Interrogating the approach the education system takes to certify teachers without actually professionalizing their careers Marshall contends that these programs rely on outdated rhetorics of labor that only widen the gap between teaching and other professional jobs Such attempts to re educate literacy teachers exploit and marginalize their work and thus prevent them from claiming the status of academic professionals In providing an overview of the history of and language used to literacy instruction she also points out that while women are overrepresented in composition instruction they are underrepresented in tenure track and administrative positions To correct and combat these inequities Marshall advocates an alternate alignment of power structures and rhetorical choices In a wide ranging survey that sheds new light on the composition workplace as well as higher education at large Response to Reform Composition and the Professionalization of Teaching boldly asks us to do away with the reductive language we inherit from the past that characterize teaching and professionalization as well as our customary responses to public criticism of education The result is a new articulation of composition as a meritorious profession

An Alternate Pragmatism for Going Public Jim Webber, 2018-03-15 An Alternate Pragmatism for Going Public interrogates composition s most prominent responses to contemporary K 16 education reform By going public teachers scholars and administrators rightfully reassert their expertise against corporate political standards and assessments like the Common Core Complete College America and the Collegiate Learning Assessment However author Jim Webber shows that composition s professional imperative for self defense only partly fulfils the broader aims of going public which include fostering public participation that can assess and potentially affirm the public good of professional judgment Drawing on the pragmatic democratic tradition Webber envisions an alternate rhetoric of professionalism one that not only reasserts compositionists expertise but also expands opportunities for publics to authorize this expertise While this public inquiry and engagement may not safeguard professional standing against neoliberal reform it reorients composition toward an equally important goal enabling publics to gauge the adequacy of the educational standardization so often advocated by contemporary reform An Alternate Pragmatism for Going Public shows how public engagement can serve composition s efforts related to going public
