Climate Change and the Bay of Bengal Sanjay Chaturvedi,Vijay Sakhuja,2015-10-16 Climate Change and the Bay of Bengal argues that in the era of climate change radically different understandings of security and sovereignty are at work It questions the geopolitics of fear and the manner in which metanarratives of climate change tend to privilege the global and national scales over other scales especially the regional and the local The authors argue in favour of a new imagination of the Bay of Bengal space as a semi enclosed sea embedded in a large marine ecosystem under the relevant provisions of the UNCLOS that impose various obligations upon its signatories to cooperate at a regional level Such an imagination anchored in geographies of hope should not remain confined to official domains and discourses but become a part of popular socio spatial consciousness through a regional public diplomacy reaching out to the grassroots level A Bay of Bengal regional seas programme under the auspices of UNEP should be conceptualized and operationalized in a manner that explicitly factors in climate change consequences into the existing understandings and approaches to environmental human security in the region ENSO Signal Network Newsletter ,2003 Global Capitalism and Climate Change Hans A. Baer,2012-06-28 Many progressive scholars particularly in the social sciences have increasingly come to acknowledge that anthropogenic climate change constitutes yet another contradiction of global capitalism This book constitutes an effort to develop a critical social science of climate change one that posits its roots in global capitalism with its emphasis on profit making a treadmill of production and consumption heavy reliance on fossil fuels and commitment to ongoing economic expansion It explores the systemic changes necessary to create a more socially just and sustainable world system that would possibly start to move humanity toward a safer climate and discusses the role of a burgeoning climate movement in this effort
