Time Stood Still

It was a bustling port on the Bay of Naples on the coast of Italy and on the morning of August 24, AD 79, the people of Pompeii woke for the last time in their beautiful town.

To the beauty of Pompeii, which stood behind the coastal city of Naples, the people of Pompeii did not know that a volcano was actually a few miles away. That day, first, and then, a cloud of smoke and ash came out of the volcano. It blocked the sun and the trees. Next, volcanic ash fell on the town. Some people thought that it was just a bad day.

Not until the town was almost buried, then, did the people realize that there was volcanic ash and red-hot lava coming out of the volcano. When the lava hit Pompeii, the people were in danger. The lava cooled into hard rock, and the town was buried.

That day, the people who escaped returned weeks later. They found the town buried under the hard volcanic rock. They tried to dig it out, but the lava was too hard.

In the 1800s when archaeologists started to dig, they found that the town had been protected by the lava. Scientists could make casts of the bodies of the people who died. They even showed the explosion that day in Pompeii.

Volcanoes can be very dangerous. They can control, usually with a bad result, the lives of the people who live near them. A volcano can be a very dangerous place.
