Digital Dead End Fighting For Social Justice In The Information Age:

Digital Dead End Virginia Eubanks, 2012-09-21 The realities of the high tech global economy for women and families in the United States The idea that technology will pave the road to prosperity has been promoted through both boom and bust Today we are told that universal broadband access high tech jobs and cutting edge science will pull us out of our current economic downturn and move us toward social and economic equality In Digital Dead End Virginia Eubanks argues that to believe this is to engage in a kind of magical thinking a technological utopia will come about simply because we want it to This vision of the miraculous power of high tech development is driven by flawed assumptions about race class and gender The realities of the information age are more complicated particularly for poor and working class women and families For them information technology can be both a tool of liberation and a means of oppression But despite the inequities of the high tech global economy optimism and innovation flourished when Eubanks worked with a community of resourceful women living at her local YWCA Eubanks describes a new approach to creating a broadly inclusive and empowering technology for people popular technology which entails shifting the focus from teaching technical skill to nurturing critical technological citizenship building resources for learning and fostering social movement Important Notice The digital edition of this book is missing some of the images found in the physical edition

Feminist Interventions in Participatory Media Lauren S. Berliner, Ron Krabill, 2018-09-14 Feminist Interventions in Participatory Media is an edited collection that brings together feminist theory and participatory media pedagogy It asks what if anything is inherently feminist about participatory media Can participatory media practices and pedagogies be used to reanimate or enact feminist futures And finally what reimagined feminist pedagogies are opened up or closed down by participatory media across various platforms spaces scales and practices Each chapter looks at a specific example where the author s have used participatory media to integrate technology and feminist praxis in production and teaching The case studies originate from sites as varied as community organizations to large scale collaborations between universities public media and social movements They offer insights into the continuities and disjunctures which stem from the adoption of and adaption to participatory media technologies In complicating and dismantling perceptions of participatory media as inherently liberatory Feminist Interventions in Participatory Media curbs the excesses of such claims and highlights those pedagogical methods and processes that do hold liberatory potential This collection thus provides a roadmap toward re imagining feminist futures while grounding that journey in the histories practices and past insights of feminism and media studies Change

Tarleton Gillespie, Pablo J. Boczkowski, Kirsten A. Foot, 2014-01-24 Scholars from communication and media studies join those from science and technology studies to examine media technologies as complex sociomaterial phenomena In recent years scholarship around media technologies has finally shed the assumption that these technologies are separate from and powerfully determining of social life looking at them instead as produced by and embedded in distinct social cultural and political practices Communication and media scholars have increasingly taken theoretical perspectives originating in science and technology studies STS while some STS scholars interested in information technologies have linked their research to media studies inquiries into the symbolic dimensions of these tools In this volume scholars from both fields come together to advance this view of media technologies as complex sociomaterial phenomena The contributors first address the relationship between materiality and mediation considering such topics as the lived realities of network infrastructure The contributors then highlight media technologies as always in motion held together through the minute unobserved work of many including efforts to keep these technologies alive Contributors Pablo J Boczkowski Geoffrey C Bowker Finn Brunton Gabriella Coleman scientists Body as Evidence Janell Hobson, 2012-10-18 In Body as Evidence Janell Hobson challenges postmodernist dismissals of identity politics and the delusional belief that the Millennial era reflects a postracial and postfeminist world. Hobson points to diverse examples in cultural narratives which suggest that new media rely on old ideologies in the shaping of the body politic. Body as Evidence creates a theoretical mash up of prose and poetry to illuminate the ways that bodies still matter as sites of political, cultural, and digital resistance. It does so by examining various representations from popular shows like American Idol to public figures like the Obamas to high profile cases like the Duke lacrosse rape scandal to current trends in digital culture. Hobson's study also discusses the women who have fueled and retooled twenty-first century media to make sense of antiracist and feminist resistance. Her discussions include the electronica of Janelle Monáe, M.I.A., and Björk; the feminist film odysseys of Wanuri Kahiu and Neloufer Pazira; and the embodied resistance found simply in raising one's voice in song, creating a blog, wearing a veil, stripping naked, or planting a tree. Spinning knowledge out of this information overload, Hobson offers a global black feminist meditation on how our bodies mobilize, destabilize, and decolonize the meanings of race and gender in an increasingly digitized and globalized world.
