Producing Predators Michael D. Wise, 2016-08 In Producing Predators Michael D Wise argues that contestations between Native and non Native people over hunting labor and the livestock industry drove the development of predator eradication programs in Montana and Alberta from the 1880s onward The history of these anti predator programs was significant not only for their ecological effects but also for their enduring cultural legacies of colonialism in the Northern Rockies By targeting wolves and other wild carnivores for extermination cattle ranchers disavowed the predatory labor of raising domestic animals for slaughter representing it instead as productive work Meanwhile federal agencies sought to purge the Blackfoot Salish Kootenai and other indigenous peoples of their so called predatory behaviors through campaigns of assimilation and citizenship that forcefully privatized tribal land and criminalized hunting and its related ritual practices Despite these colonial pressures Native communities resisted and negotiated the terms of their dispossession by representing their own patterns of work food and livelihood as productive By exploring predation and production as fluid cultural logics for valuing labor rather than just a set of biological processes Producing Predators offers a new perspective on the history of the American West and the modern history of colonialism more broadly

People, Parks, and Power Maria Sapignoli, Robert K. Hitchcock, 2023-11-08 This book presents a critical review of the ethics of conservation related resettlement We examine what has become known as the parks versus people debate also known as the new conservation debate which has pitted indigenous and other local people against nation states and social scientists against ecologists and conservationists for the past several decades Aiming to promote biodiversity conservation and habitat preservation some biologists park planners and conservation organizations have recommended that indigenous and other people should be removed from protected areas Local people for their part have argued that residents of the areas that were turned into protected areas national parks game reserves and monuments had managed them in productive ways for generations and that they should have the right to remain there and to use natural resources as long as they do so sustainably This position is often supported by indigenous rights organizations and social scientists especially anthropologists There are also some conservation oriented NGOs that have policies involving a more human rights oriented approach aimed at poverty alleviation sustainable development and social justice The book discusses biodiversity conservation indigenous peoples those who are ethnic minorities and who are often marginalized politically and protected areas those categories of land set aside by nation states that have various kinds of rules about land use and residence The focus initially is on case studies from protected areas in the United States including Yellowstone National Park Yosemite National Park and Glacier National Park and on national monuments and historical parks where resettlement took place We then consider issues of coercive conservation in southern Africa including Hwange National Park Zimbabwe the Central Kalahari Game Reserve Botswana Etosha National Park and Bwabwata National Park Namibia and Kgalagadi Transfrontier Park South Africa and Botswana All of these cases involved involuntary resettlement at the hands of the governments In the book we consider some of the social impacts of conservation forced resettlement CfR many of which tend to be negative After that we assess some of the strategies employed by indigenous peoples in their efforts to recover rights of access to protected areas and the cultural and natural resources that they contain Examples are drawn from cases in Asia Africa and South America Conclusions are provided regarding the ethics of conservation related resettlement and some of the best practices that could be followed particularly with regard to indigenous peoples

Protecting Yellowstone Michael J. Yochim, 2013-03-15 Yellowstone National Park looks like a pristine western landscape populated by its wild inhabitants bison grizzly bears and wolves But the bison do not always range freely snowmobile noise intrudes upon the park's profound winter silence and some tourist villages are located in prime grizzly bear habitat Despite these problems the National Park Service has succeeded in reintroducing wolves allowing wildfires to play their natural role in park forests and prohibiting a gold mine that would be present in other more typical western landscapes Each of these issues bison snowmobiles grizzly bears wolves fires and the New World Mine was the center of a recent policy making controversy involving federal politicians robust debate with interested stakeholders and discussions about the relevant science Yet the outcomes of the controversies varied considerably depending on politics science how well park managers allied themselves with external interests and public thinking about the effects of park proposals on their access and economies Michael Yochim examines the primary influences upon contemporary national park policy making and considers how those influences shaped or constrained the final policy In addition Yochim considers how park managers may best work within the contemporary policy making context to preserve national parks

Novel Ecosystems Richard J. Hobbs, Eric S. Higgs, Carol Hall, 2013-01-07

Land conversion climate change and species invasions are contributing to the widespread emergence of novel ecosystems which demand a shift in how we think about traditional approaches to conservation restoration and environmental management They are novel because they exist without historical precedents and are self sustaining Traditional approaches emphasizing native species and historical continuity are challenged by novel ecosystems that deliver critical ecosystems services or are simply immune to practical restorative efforts Some fear that by raising the issue of novel ecosystems we are simply paving the way for a more laissez faire attitude to conservation and restoration Regardless of the range of views and perceptions about novel ecosystems their existence is becoming ever more obvious and prevalent in today s rapidly changing world In this first comprehensive volume to look at the ecological social cultural ethical and policy dimensions of novel ecosystems the authors argue these altered systems are overdue for careful analysis and that we need to figure out how to intervene in them responsibly This book brings together researchers from a range of disciplines together with practitioners and policy makers to explore the questions surrounding novel ecosystems It includes chapters on key concepts and methodologies for deciding when and how to intervene in systems as well as a rich collection of case studies and perspective pieces It will be a valuable resource for researchers managers and policy makers interested in the question of how humanity manages and restores ecosystems in a rapidly changing world A companion website with additional resources is available at www.wiley.com/go/hobbs_ecosystems
