An after cooler is installed in the airline immediately downstream of the compressor. Compressor do not remove the moisture. Thus, an after cooler is essential to reduce the air temperature to convenient levels and to act as a first stage in removal of moisture prior to entering an air dryer. After cooler remove only about 80% of the moisture from the air leaving the compressor. An air dryer removes all moisture by lowering the temperature of the pressurized air to a dew point of 10

Answer:

The dew point is the temperature at which air is saturated and thus the relative humidity is 100%
