Computer-Based Instruction in Military Environments Robert J. Seidel, P.D. Weddle, 2012-12-06 This collection of papers is the result of a symposium sponsored by NATO's Defense Research Group Panel VIII in the Spring of 1985. The symposium came into being when it became obvious to the NATO countries that research development and utilization of advanced technologies for training was the best means of increasing both training effectiveness and efficiency. This symposium was the second in a series of three devoted to training. The series was structured to cover all aspects of training. The first series addressed the value of training, the second one dealt with the application of training technologies, and the third and last of the series focused on academic issues concerned with the effect of prior learning on subsequent learning. The fact that a major American publisher has determined that computer-based instruction is the technology of greatest interest to the NATO community is not surprising. Advances in microprocessor technology have revolutionized both how and where we train. During this symposium, there were a limited number of carefully chosen exhibits to demonstrate the various applications of computer-based training techniques. In the following papers, you will find both a practical and scientific basis for the way current and future training and training systems should be designed, applied, and utilized. We know that training must be done faster and more effectively.

Preparing Students for College and Careers Katie Larsen McClarty, Krista D. Mattern, Matthew N. Gaertner, 2017-08-22 Preparing Students for College and Careers addresses measurement and research issues related to college and career readiness. Educational reform efforts across the United States have increasingly taken aim at measuring and improving postsecondary readiness. These initiatives include developing new content standards, redesigning assessments and performance levels, legislating new developmental education policy for colleges and universities, and highlighting gaps between graduates' skills and employers' needs. In this comprehensive book, scholarship from leading experts on each of these topics is collected for assessment professionals and for education researchers interested in this new area of focus. Cross-disciplinary chapters cover the current state of research, best practices, leading interventions, and a variety of measurement concepts, including construct definitions, assessments, performance levels, score interpretations, and test uses. The Open Access version of this book is available at <http://www.taylorfrancis.com> and has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives 4.0 license.

Computer-Based Testing Craig N. Mills, Maria T. Potenza, John J. Fremer, William C. Ward, 2005-04-11 Although computer-based tests (CBT) have been administered for many years, improvements in the speed and power of computers, coupled with reductions in their cost, have made large-scale computer delivery of tests increasingly feasible. CBT is now a common form of test delivery for licensure certification and admissions tests. Many large-scale high-stakes testing programs have introduced CBT either as an option or as the sole means of test delivery. Although this movement to CBT has to a great extent been successful, it has not been without problems. Advances in psychometrics are required to ensure that those who rely on test results can have at least the same confidence in CBTs as they have in traditional forms of assessment. This volume stems from an ETS-sponsored colloquium in which more than 200 measurement professionals from eight countries and 29 states convened to assess the current and future status of CBT. The formal agenda for the colloquium was divided into three major segments: Test Models, Test Administration, and Test Analysis and Scoring. Each segment consisted of several presentations followed by comments from noted psychometricians and a break out session in which presenters and discussants identified important issues and established priorities for a CBT research agenda. This volume contains the papers presented at the colloquium, the discussant remarks based on those papers, and the research agenda that was generated from the break out sessions. Computer Based Testing: Building the Foundation for Future Assessments is must reading for professionals, scholars, and advanced students working in the testing field as well as people in the information technology field who have an interest in testing. 8000+ ABBREVIATION OF COMPUTERS, 2020-04-25. Fredericks Volkwein, 2011-11-22. This volume offers administrators and practitioners a summary guide to assessment in higher education from the reasons for undertaking assessment to the delivery of findings. It opens with the questions that precede an effective study and drive research design: To what extent is the study aimed at educational improvement and to what extent is it aimed at external accountability? Are the results expected to demonstrate goal attainment, improvement, comparison to others, meeting standards, cost effective investment? What is the population from whom assessment data are being collected? Are we measuring the knowledge and skills of individuals and making decisions about their remediation, certification or development? Or are we sampling from particular groups of students and comparing them to each other or perhaps to themselves over time? The core of the volume is devoted to the objects of assessment: basic skills, general education, knowledge attainment in the major, personal growth, attitudes and satisfaction and alumni outcomes, keeping in mind both cognitive and noncognitive measures. One chapter describes common obstacles to effective assessment, others describe conceptual models, research methods and data collection strategies and instruments. The concluding chapter underscores the importance of communicating research results effectively.
