Associate Pastors Michael Matthew Mauriello ,2022-06-21 Rather than simply leading or following why not consider stewarding Associate pastors of all kinds whether assigned to children youth worship adult or outreach are often caught in the middle of complicated relationships in their congregations It s an emotionally taxing and organizationally confusing position In Associate Pastors Michael Matthew Mauriello demonstrates how associate pastors can harness the ambiguity that accompanies their role in ways that can mutually benefit church members and other pastoral staff The heart of Associate Pastors comes from personal interviews with twenty five associate pastors in small to medium sized churches who have served in pastoral ministry positions for more than ten years Their shared experiences demonstrate the unique social and spiritual dynamics of the associate pastor role and suggest great promise for those willing to approach their calling with creativity and care Specifically when associate pastors facilitate learning within their congregations they confer benefits on church leadership and laypeople alike Dr Michael Mauriello's research is fueled by his love for God and the desire to see pastors flourish Associate Pastors Ministry from the Middle is a must read for Christian leaders Deborah Colwill associate professor of educational and leadership studies Trinity Evangelical Divinity School Dr Michael Mauriello has written a thoughtful and well researched guide for associate pastors who want to understand the dynamics and strategic advantages of their role He not only understands the position but he can help pastors serve effectively from the middle seat Lee Eclov adjunct professor Trinity Evangelical Divinity School columnist PreachingToday com This is a much needed contribution to resources addressing the unique role of associate pastors those who navigate complicated relationships as a pastoral practice Donald C Guthrie executive director Center for Transformational Churches Jeanette L Hsieh Chair of Educational Leadership and director of the PhD educational studies Trinity Evangelical Divinity School
