Abstract. Staphylococcus aureus is a leading pathogen in the hospital environment. The resistance against the antibiotic vancomycin is a serious problem. In this study, we investigated the prevalence of vancomycin-resistant S. aureus (VISA) in the hospital environment. The study was conducted in a tertiary care hospital in Istanbul, Turkey. A total of 100 S. aureus isolates were collected from different hospital wards. The isolates were tested for vancomycin resistance using a modified disk diffusion method. The results showed that 15% of the isolates were VISA. The prevalence of VISA was significantly higher in the intensive care unit (ICU) compared to other wards. The study highlights the need for strict infection control measures to reduce the prevalence of VISA in the hospital environment.
