Rituals and Ritual Theory in Ancient

Israel Ithamar Gruenwald, 2003-01-20 This book in many ways the first of its kind addresses the issue of rituals and their embedded ritual theory in the religion of ancient Israel The leading idea of the book is that rituals are a autonomous form of expression of the human mind The human mind expresses itself in rituals as it does in language the arts and mathematics Rituals are not performative translations of symbols and ideas and in religion of any kind of theology Theology does not explain how rituals are done and how they accomplish what they claim to do The book begins with a general discussion of what rituals are and argues that the ritual theory of each ritual is not in any general theory of ritual but embedded in the ritual act itself Every ritual is structured in such a way that its details create the behavioural logic that makes ritual work The difference is explored between the early and institutionalised phases of the religion of ancient Israel Here the role of the economic ethos is the focus of the discussion The book explores the links between myth and rituals arguing that the connectedness with ritual endows a story with a myth essence Detailed discussions of various rituals exemplify the major theoretical discourse The book is of interest to scholars in the areas of Halakhah law and ritual religious studies and the anthropology of religion

How History Made the Mind David Martel Johnson, 2003 How History Made the Mind David Martel Johnson argues that what we now think of as reason or objective thinking is not a natural product of the existence of an enlarged brain or culmination of innate biological tendencies Rather it is a way of learning to use the brain that runs counter to the natural characteristics involved in being an animal a mammal and a primate Johnson defends his theory of mind as a cultural artifact against objections and uses it to question a number of currently fashionable positions in philosophy of mind known theories of Julian Jaynes which Johnson argues go too far in the direction of emphasizing the dissimilarities between ancient and modern ways of thinking

An Ethology of Religion and Art Bryan Rennie, 2020-02-13 Drawing from sources including the ethology of art and the cognitive science of religion this book proposes an improved understanding of both art and religion as behaviors developed in the process of human evolution Looking at both art and religion as closely related but not identical behaviors a more coherent definition of religion can be formed that avoids pitfalls such as the Eurocentric characterization of religion as belief or the dismissal of the category as nothing more than false belief or the product of scholarly invention The book integrates highly relevant insights from the ethology and anthropology of art particularly the identification of the special by Ellen Dissanayake and art as agency by Alfred Gell with insights from among others Ann Taves who similarly identified specialness as characteristic of religion It integrates these insights into a useful and accurate understanding and explanation of the relationship of art and religion and of religion as a human behavior This in turn is used to suggest how art can contribute to the development and maintenance of religions The innovative combination of art science and religion in this book makes it a vital resource for scholars of Religion and the Arts Aesthetics Religious Studies Religion and Science and Religious Anthropology

Science and Religion Paul Kurtz, 2003-04 In this stimulating collection of articles contributors discuss the Big Bang and the origin of the universe the nature of the soul near death experiences and spiritualism New Patterns for Comparative Religion William E. Paden, 2016-05-19 The cross cultural study of religion has always gone hand in hand with the worldview sciences or intellectual frameworks of the time. These frames, whether focused on psychology or politics, gender or colonialism, bring out perspectives for understanding religious behavior. Today, one of our common civic worldviews is represented in the shift from scriptural to evolutionary history. This volume brings together in one place key essays by professor emeritus William Paden showing a progression of steps he has taken in exploring bridgeworks between comparative religion and evolutionary models of religious behavior. One of the leading scholars in religious studies, Paden shows ways that religion can be contextualized as part of the natural world and thus seen as reflecting the ingrained sociality and world-making drive of the human species. Paden argues that although comparativism has been challenged as too culture-bound, too western, or too gendered, cross-over categories and concepts between religious traditions cannot be avoided. Arguing that there are recurrent patterns of human behavior common to our species and that thereby underlie all cultures, he proposes that the missing link in the Religion Evolution debate is comparative religion: a global cross-cultural perspective on religious behaviours throughout time. Each article is contextualized within this overall trajectory of thought within Paden's work and the history of the discipline as a whole.
