Black Submarine
 A submarine without a conning tower, the crew going to the surface being obtained by different means, connected with the object of the attack. This attack planning is not considered the most effective, because it requires more than one submarine to attack the same target. The submarine must be able to attack the target and then return to the surface to be refueled and to be able to attack again. The submarine must be able to attack the target and then return to the surface to be refueled and to be able to attack again.
