Changing Fortunes Income Mobility And Poverty Dynamics In Britain:

Changing Fortunes Stephen P. Jenkins, 2011-07-28 Most information about the incomes of people in Britain today such as provided by official statistics tells us how much inequality there is or how many poor people there are in a given year and compares those numbers with the corresponding statistics from the previous year Missing from snapshot pictures like these is information about whether the people who were poor one year are the same people who are poor the following year and the circumstances of those with middle income or top income origins are not tracked over time This book fills in the missing information The author likens Britain's income distribution to a multi story apartment building with the numbers of residents on the different floors corresponding to the concentration of people at different income levels in any particular year The poorest are in the basement the richest are in the penthouse and the majority somewhere in between This book assesses how much movement there is between floors the frequency of moves whether the distance travelled has been changing over the last two decades and whether basement dwellers ever reach the penthouse Using the British Household Panel Survey which has followed and interviewed the same people annually since 1991 it documents the patterns of income mobility and poverty dynamics in Britain shows how they have changed over the last two decades and explores the reasons why It draws attention to the relationships between changes in income and changes in other aspects of people's lives not only in their jobs earnings benefits and credits but also in the households within which they live people marry and divorce children are born Trends over time are also related to changes in Britain's labour market and the reforms to the tax benefit system introduced by the Labour government in the late 1990s

Income mobility of rural households: Are female headed households participating in Ethiopia's economic growth? Warner, James, Mekonnen, Yalew, 2022-10-11 Over the last decade Ethiopia has had one of the fastest growing economies in the world with annual growth rates averaging approximately 9.2% and 5.3% for the overall economy and the agricultural sector respectively Concomitant with this growth has been falling poverty rates and slightly rising inequality While average growth has been strong relatively little research has been performed on mobility within income quartiles particularly among rural households Using a panel of 1,899 households taken from three rural household surveys carried out between 2012-2019 this paper explores the overall levels and trends of recent income mobility in rural Ethiopia We conclude that female headed households at the lower asset quartiles are earning less income marketing a smaller share of cereal crops and experiencing less growth which unlike comparable male headed households in lower quartiles is leading to relative stagnation and rising inequality The implications for policymakers are important for improved targeting for pro poor growth strategies as well as a better understanding of the heterogeneous economic status of female headed households in rural Ethiopia more generally

A Broken Social Elevator? How to Promote Social Mobility OECD, 2018-06-15 This report provides new evidence on social mobility in the context of increased inequalities of income and opportunities in OECD and selected emerging economies It covers the aspects of both social mobility between parents and
