

NYC DOE Framework for Teaching: Danielson Rubric

	INEFFECTIVE	DEVELOPING	EFFECTIVE	HIGHLY EFFECTIVE
1a: The teacher displays knowledge of content and pedagogy	In planning and practice, the teacher makes use of content knowledge but seems to rely more on what is taught in the textbook. The teacher displays little understanding of pedagogical knowledge important to students' learning of the content. The teacher displays little concern and interest in the ways of pedagogical approaches available to students' learning of the content.	The teacher is familiar with the important concepts in the discipline, but displays a lack of a systematic understanding of how these concepts relate to student learning. The teacher understands some content-specific pedagogical knowledge, although such knowledge may be less useful or incomplete. The teacher's plans and practice reflect a limited range of pedagogical approaches to the discipline or to the students.	The teacher displays solid knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to student learning. The teacher demonstrates a wide understanding of pedagogical approaches and content-specific understanding of the links to necessary cognitive structures that must be in place for learning. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wide range of effective pedagogical approaches in the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.	The teacher displays extensive knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to student learning and to other disciplines. The teacher demonstrates wide understanding of pedagogical approaches and content-specific understanding of the links to necessary cognitive structures that must be in place for learning. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wide range of effective pedagogical approaches in the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.
1b: Planning individualized instruction	Learning activities are poorly aligned with the instructional objectives, do not follow a sequential progression, are not designed to engage students' interest, intellectual activity and have a monotone, low effectiveness, unvaryingly negative or unrelatable to the activities and offer no variety.	Some of the learning activities and materials are aligned with instructional objectives and represent real-world application challenges, but with no different student handling or activities. Instructional groups generally support the activities, with some variety. The teacher or unit has a strong visible structure, but the progression of activities is unvarying, with only minor or minimal time allocations.	Most of the learning activities are aligned with the instructional objectives and follow a sequential progression suitable to groups of students. The learning activities have some with time allocations, they represent significant cognitive challenges, with some differentiation for different groups of students and varied use of instructional groups.	The sequence of learning activities follows a coherent argument, is aligned to instructional goals, and is designed to engage students in high-level cognitive activity. There are appropriate differentiation for individual learners. Instructional groups are varied appropriately with some opportunity for students to help.
2a: Creating an environment of respect	Behavioral boundaries interactions, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally negative, inappropriate, or leave no room for a teacher and/or, cultural learning needs, and if made good and true. Student interactions are characterized by negative, put-down, or conflict. The teacher does not deal with all inappropriate behavior.	Both teacher and student interactions, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally appropriate, but may reflect occasional inappropriate, disruptive, or disruptive for students' open, culture, and development and true. Students rarely demonstrate disruptive behavior. The teacher attempts to respond to all inappropriate behavior with some results. The majority of the interactions is neutral, unvarying neither positive nor conflict.	Both teacher and student interactions are friendly and the interactions go on following and respect. Both teacher and student are appropriate to the age, culture, and development needs of the students, with positive among students are generally polite and respectful, and students exhibit respect for the teacher. The teacher responds successfully to all respectful behavior for among students. The majority of the interactions is polite, respectful and harmonious, though students may be aware when students who are taking informal roles.	Classroom interactions between the teacher and students and among students are highly respectful, reflecting genuine warmth, caring, and sensitivity to students' individuality. Students exhibit respect for the teacher and contribute to high level of civility among all students in the class. The unit is built on a foundation where all students feel valued and a comfortable learning environment.
2b: Managing student behavior	There appears to be inconsistent standards of conduct, or students in the classroom. There is little or no time for monitoring of students' learning or engagement to students' behavior in comparison and some potential students aligning.	Standards of conduct appear to have been established, but their implementation is inconsistent. The teacher tries, with some results, to monitor students' behavior and respond to students' misbehavior.	Standards of conduct are generally appropriate. The teacher monitors student behavior against established standards of conduct. Teacher response to students' misbehavior is consistent, proportionate, and respectful to students and is effective.	Standards of conduct are consistently appropriate. Students take an active role in monitoring their own behavior and for their efforts. Students appear to understand and accept it. Teacher monitoring of student behavior is subtle and persistent. The teacher's response to student misbehavior is sensitive to individual student needs and respects students' dignity.
