A Spider's World Friedrich G. Barth,2013-03-09 Spiders are wonderful creatures Their varied and complex range of behavior and highly developed sensory systems are excellently adapted to the environmental conditions as is proven by their evolutionary success Over 400 million years spiders have developed their sensory organs to a fascinating technical perfection and complexity In his intriguing book Professor Friedrich G Barth puts this technical perfection into the context of biology in which the interaction between environment and sensory organs and the selectivity of the senses as a link between environment and behavior play a major role

Primates Kurt Benirschke,2012-12-06 This conference represents the first time in my life when I felt it was a misfortune rather than a major cause of my happiness that I do conservation work in New Guinea Yes it is true that New Guinea is a fascinating microcosm it has fascinating birds and people and it has large expanses of undisturbed rainforest In the course of my work there helping the Indonesian government and World Wildlife Fund set up a comprehensive national park system I have been able to study animals in areas without any human population But New Guinea has one serious drawback it has no primates except for humans Thus I come to this conference on primate conservation as an underprivileged and emotionally deprived observer rather than as an involved participant Nevertheless it is easy for anyone to become interested in primate conservation The public cares about primates More specifically to state things more realistically many people care some of the time about some primates Primates are rivaled only by birds pandas and the big cats in their public appeal For some other groups of animals the best we can say is that few people care about them infrequently For most groups of animals no one cares about them ever
