

Tour Commander Jimmie O'Dea by Dennis Thornton

"Sgt. Jimmie O'Dea" is a Tour Commander inside the building. Like all of the carvings in this project, we worked with a scale that has to be spot-on when they are added to the buildings. This is a challenge, but easy enough to do if you keep the scale in mind. Additional carvings were added to the police station by CCA members Sandy Smith, Gene Fuller, and Don Mertz.

We decided to place trash cans in front of station, so I added two rats to the cans, watching the action on the street. These small details keep the project interesting.

—Dennis Thornton

Police officer by Eldon Humphreys

The decision to divide the 30s Street Scene into separate building projects allows us display it as one large scene, or as individual building scenes. This allowed CCA members to specialize in carving pieces that they were more familiar with and interested in doing.

—Eldon Humphreys

Tips from Dennis Thornton

- I use a #2 lead pencil on my block of wood. It helps me see how much wood I want to remove, and it can help illustrate movement, positions of the body, and the center of the carving. It is easy to make a bad cut without a pencil line to show you the way.
- Removing dirt and pencil marks at the conclusion of carving is an important step that is often forgotten. I normally use a soft toothbrush, mild dish soap, and a little water to help wash away dirt. I dry the carving with a towel. Take care not to use too much water, as this can warp thin areas of wood.
- While carving caricatures, I like to keep the carving clean by removing fuzzies and other marks before moving on to a new area. Not only does this save time, but you'll see more clearly where you may need to make adjustments.
