

Human Development (Papalia)

CHAPTER 1: The Study of Human development

Human Development- a scientific study of systematic processes of changes and stability in people.

Processes of changes and stability throughout a human lifespan

- Developmental scientists look at the ways in which people change from conception through maturity as well as the characteristics that remain stable.

Life-span development- from "womb to tomb", comprising the entire human life span from conception to death.

Concept of human development as a lifelong process and can be studied scientifically.

Goals of human development -D, E, P, I

Describe (Description)- to describe human development

Explanation (explain)- explaining human development by using theories/researches

Prediction (predict)- to predict future human development

Intervention (intervene)- to intervene in the development, like for example using therapy.

Development is messy. It's complex and multifaceted and shaped by interacting arcs of influences. Thus, development is best understood with input of a variety of theoretical research orientations and is mostly appropriately studied using multiple disciplines.

Domains of development -PD, CD, PSD

Physical Development- growth of the body and brain, sensory capacities, motor skills, and health.

Cognitive Development- learning, attention, memory, language, thinking, reasoning and creativity.

Psychosocial Development- emotions, personality, and social relationships.

Influences on development

Individual indifferences- study on the differences on characteristics, influences, and developmental outcomes.

Nature (heredity)- Heredity and biological process. Internal and driven by heredity. It consists of inborn traits and characteristics provided by a child's biological parents.

Nurture(environment)- Environmental influences. outside the body, starting at conception with the prenatal environment inside the womb, and continuing throughout life.

> Nature and Nurture is fiercely debated and theorists differ in the weight they assign to each other.

Maturation- the unfolding natural sequence of physical changes and behavior patterns. For example, a child that is learning to talk and walk.

> According to Sir Benny, wala tayong control sa maturation.

> As children grow into adolescents and then into adults, individual indifferences in innate characteristics and life experience lay a greater role. Throughout life, maturation continues to influence certain biological processes, such as brain development.

Context of development- For infants, the immediate context usually is the family. But the family in turn is the subject to wider and ever-changing influencers of neighborhood, community and society.

Normative Influences- biological or environmental events that affect many people or most people in the society in similar ways and events that touch only certain individuals.

- Normative age-graded influences- highly similar for people in particular age groups. The timing of biological events is fairly predictable within a normal range. E.g menstruation is common for girls who are 12 yrs old.
- Normative history- graded influences- significant events (world war, covid, great depression) that shape the behavior and attitudes of historical generation: a group of people who experience events at a formative time in their lives.
- Cohort- a group of individual bound about the same time.

> A historical generation is not the same as cohort: a group of people born at the same time. A historical generation may contain one or more cohort, but cohorts are part of the historical generation only if they experience major, shaping historical events.

Non normative influences- unusual events that have a major impact on individual lives because they disturb the expected sequence life cycle. They are either typical events that happen in an atypical time of life.
