

The background of the entire cover is a black and white photograph. It shows the silhouettes of two people, likely a man and a woman, sitting and facing each other in conversation. The person on the left is seen in profile, looking towards the right. The person on the right is also in profile, looking towards the left. They appear to be sitting at a table, with some papers or a book visible between them. The background of the photograph is out of focus, showing what might be a window or a bright outdoor area. The overall mood is contemplative and professional.

Paul Jones, 2004-11-23 Doing Better is intended to help therapists and counselors to explore more fully and systematically the processes of self improvement in their work and lives Relational Being Kenneth J. Gergen, 2009-07-30 This book builds on two current developments in psychology scholarship and practice The first centers on broad discontent with the individualist tradition in which the rational agent or autonomous self is considered the fundamental atom of social life Critique of individualism spring not only from psychologists working in the academy but also from communities of therapy and counseling The second and related development from which this work builds is the search for alternatives to individualist understanding Thus therapists such as Steve Mitchell along with feminists at the Stone Center expand the psychoanalytic tradition to include a relational orientation to therapy The present volume will give voice to the critique of individualism but its major thrust is to develop and illustrate a far more radical and potentially exciting landscape of relational thought and practice that now exists Most existing attempts to build a relational foundation remain committed to a residual form of individualist psychology The present work carves out a space of understanding in which relational process stands prior to the very concept of the individual More broadly the book attempts to develop a thoroughgoing relational account of human activity In doing so Gergen reconstitutes the mind as a manifestation of relationships and bears out these ideas in a range of everyday professional practices including family therapy collaborative classrooms and organizational psychology The Therapist's Notebook for Integrating Spirituality in Counseling II Karen B.
