

2 Aiko calculates the density of some objects.

(a) A block of iron has a mass of 19.68 g.

The volume of the block is 2.50 cm^3 .

(i) Write down the equation Aiko uses to calculate density.

density = [1]

(ii) Calculate the density of Aiko's block of iron.

density = g / cm^3 [1]

(b) Aiko calculates the density of four objects.

Look at her results.

object	density in g / cm^3
A	2.7
B	8.4
C	0.002
D	13.6

Which object is a gas?

Circle the correct answer.

A B C D

Explain your answer.

Automated Mathematical Induction Hantao Zhang, 2012-12-06 It has been shown how the common structure that defines a family of proofs can be expressed as a proof plan 5 This common structure can be exploited in the search for particular proofs A proof plan has two complementary components a proof method and a proof tactic By prescribing the structure of a proof at the level of primitive inferences a tactic 11 provides the guarantee part of the proof In contrast a method provides a more declarative explanation of the proof by means of preconditions Each method has associated effects The execution of the effects simulates the application of the corresponding tactic Theorem proving in the proof planning framework is a two phase process 1 Tactic construction is by a process of method composition Given a goal an applicable method is selected The applicability of a method is determined by evaluating the method s preconditions The method effects are then used to calculate subgoals This process is applied recursively until no more subgoals remain Because of the one to one correspondence between methods and tactics the output from this process is a composite tactic tailored to the given goal 2 Tactic execution generates a proof in the object level logic Note that no search is involved in the execution of the tactic All the search is taken care of during the planning process The real benefits of having separate planning and execution phases become appar ent when a proof attempt fails

The Evolving Telomeres Arthur J. Lustig, Kurt

Runge, 2016-07-19 What controls the different rates of evolution to give rise to conserved and divergent proteins and RNAs How many trials until evolution can adapt to physiological changes Every organism has arisen through multiple molecular changes and the mechanisms that are employed mutagenesis recombination transposition have been an issue left to the elegant discipline of evolutionary biology But behind the theory are realities that we have yet to ascertain How does an evolving cell accommodate its requirements for both conserving its essential functions while also providing a selective advantage In this volume we focus on the evolution of the eukaryotic telomere the ribo nuclear protein complex at the end of a linear chromosome The telomere is an example of a single chromosomal element that must function to maintain genomic stability The telomeres of all species must provide a means to avoid the attrition from semi conservative DNA replication and a means of telomere elongation the telomere replication problem For example telomerase is the most well studied mechanism to circumvent telomere attrition by adding the short repeats that constitutes most telomeres The telomere must also guard against the multiple activities that can act on an unprotected double strand break requiring a window or checkpoint to compensate for telomere sequence loss as well as protection against non specific processes the telomere protection problem This volume describes a range of methodologies including mechanistic studies phylogenetic comparisons and data based theoretical approaches to study telomere evolution over a broad spectrum of organisms that includes plants animals and fungi In telomeres that are elongated by telomerases different components have widely different rates of evolution Telomerases evolved from roots in archaebacteria including splicing factors and LTR transposition At the conserved level the telomere is a rebel among double strand breaks DSBs and has altered the function of the highly conserved proteins of the ATM pathway into an elegant means of protecting the chromosome end and maintaining telomere size homeostasis through a competition of positive and negative factors This homeostasis coupled with highly conserved capping proteins is sufficient for protection However far more proteins are present at the telomere to provide additional species specific functions Do these proteins provide insight into how the cell allows for rapid change without self destruction
