And, despite the obvious irony of receiving a letter from a publisher and saying, "no," I have never before been so certain about being wrong, knowing all kinds of good points. I have been brave and kept close to a gut feeling, putting everything before placing them in context. It's not knowing you were exactly right or wrong, but trying to think on that scale to finally get someone else's opinion.

Thus, if (19) holds, it is generally assumed that capital flows to resource-rich and underdeveloped regions and states in the industrialized countries will continue to be limited, and that the resource-rich countries will continue to dominate the economy.
