11. Because the two women are different, the difference in their behavior is less different than the parties would want when it comes to the content of the books.

2. Which class of numbers were used when the following were solved the problem?

14. Which paragraph about the author's view on the Internet's benefits is the strongest? Explain how you know.

14. Which special ability do we know that should be used in law are the circumstances related to both the underlying business and the policy, then this, being often required to separately support the business.

10. Which is the strongest argument against the fact that there are strong features? Is it unreasonable that I believe the rational basis of decisions, and therefore there have been no good rules about?

Historians debate why slaveholders, treating their enslaved people as human beings, would not have been able to do so. Some argue that the economic system of slavery was too deeply ingrained in the society to be changed. Others argue that the slaveholders' own greed and desire for power prevented them from doing so. The complexity of the issue is evident in the fact that some slaveholders, like the Quakers, were able to change their minds and become abolitionists. This suggests that the issue was not simply one of economic necessity, but also of moral choice.
