

Commentary on Matthew: The Gospel of the Kingdom

By

Charles Haddon Spurgeon

With Introductory Notes by Mrs. C. H. Spurgeon

Introductory Note

Few and simple should be the words which introduce this eagerly expected book by this many friends who will welcome it.

This beloved author has gone to his eternal reward. He is "the blessed of the Lord forever," but he has left with us this last precious legacy, which shows our hearts answered after his.

It stands alone in its sacred and wonderful significance. It is the first worker's final labor of love for his Lord. It is the last word, long from lips that were once sounding forth the promises of his king. It is the dying shout of victory from the standard-bearer, who bore his Captain's colors unflinchingly through the thickets of the fight.

Reverently, we lay it at the dear Master's feet with love, and tears, and prayers. It needs no comment. It is beyond all criticism. But His acceptance and approval will be its reward and glory.

During two previous winters in the south of France, a great part of dear Mr. Spurgeon's leisure had been devoted to the production of this commentary and it found much internal evidence of the brightness of the sunny spots where it was written.

On the last visit to Mentone, after his terrible illness, his mental strength was apparently quite restored and this delightful worker was eagerly resumed. So eagerly, that we often feared his health would suffer from his devotion to his happy task. But it was difficult to persuade him to relax his efforts. With his Master, he could say, "My master is to do the will of Him that sent me, and to finish His work," and so within a few days of the termination of his lovely and gracious life, he was incessantly occupied in expounding the portion of God's Word.

Much of the later portion of the work, therefore, was written in the very Garden-land of Heaven, amid the cheering glories of the unseen world and around "within sight of the golden gates."

Such words acquire a solemnity and pathos with which nothing else could invest them. We listen almost as to a voice "from the exalted glory."

Yet, in reading over the proof-sheets of my beloved's last work, I have been as much struck by the professed simplicity as by the tender power of the dear apostle's
