The Idea of Art as Propaganda in France, 1750-1799 James A Leith, 1964-12-15 One of the most modern features of the French Revolution was its intention of shaping a new kind of citizen by exposing him from childhood to inspirational messages and behavioral models In this effort to regenerate the masses the French Revolutionaries sought to employ not only schools but newspapers festivals dramas poems songs paintings statues and engravings as well At the peak of the Terror French leaders brought the West to the threshold of the totalitarian state in the fullest sense of the world they established a single party state directed a regimented economy created a mass army and sought to mobilize all the media capable of influencing the human mind In was an interest in both art and the Revolution which led Professor Leith to explore the growth of the idea of using art as one instrument of propaganda The idea proved to have deep roots in western civilization going back to classical thinkers medieval churchmen and the art officials of such monarchs as Louis XIV But following the hedonistic rococo art of the first half of the eighteenth century this idea of didactic art took on a new lease of life reaching a crescendo during the Terror This book analyses the contribution of the philosophes the Encyclopedists royal officials art critics and revolutionary leaders to the resurgence of the idea it also probes the peculiar psychological assumptions which led eighteenth century thinkers to believe in the efficacy of visual propaganda The outcome of this idea of art as an ideological weapon was involved in the fate of the Revolution itself yet it was also affected by certain curious tensions already evident in the minds of its advocates under the Old Regime Lingering interest in purely aesthetic values the affirmation of the need for creative freedom and determination to maintain French cultural hegemony all complicated the effort to turn art into a vehicle of civic instruction The final chapter examines the role of these tensions in the development of the idea in the closing phase of the Revolution This book should appeal not only to those interested in French civilization the age of Enlightenment and the French Revolution but to those concerned with the role of art and the artist in modern society as well
