Mothers Who Kill Their Children Cheryl L Meyer, Michelle Oberman, Kelly White, Michelle Rone, 2001-08-01 An inside look into patterns and potential prevention plans for one of the most hotly sensationalized crimes A special kind of horror is reserved for mothers who kill their children Cases such as those of Susan Smith who drowned her two young sons by driving her car into a lake and Melissa Drexler who disposed of her newborn baby in a restroom at her prom become media sensations Unfortunately in addition to these high profile cases hundreds of mothers kill their children in the United States each year The question most often asked is why What would drive a mother to kill her own child Those who work with such cases whether in clinical psychology social services law enforcement or academia often lack basic understandings about the types of circumstances and patterns which might lead to these tragic deaths and the social constructions of motherhood which may affect women's actions These mothers oftentimes defy the myths and media exploitation of them as evil insane or lacking moral principles and they are not a homogenous group In obvious ways intervention strategies should differ for a teenager who denies her pregnancy and then kills her newborn and a mother who kills her two toddlers out of mental illness or to further a relationship A typology is needed to help us to understand the different cases that commonly occur and the patterns they follow in order to make possible more effective prevention plans Mothers Who Kill Their Children draws on extensive research to identify clear patterns among the cases of women who kill their children shedding light on why some women commit these acts The characteristics the authors establish will be helpful in creating more meaningful policies more targeted intervention strategies and more knowledgeable evaluations of these cases when they arise
