Unlocking your phone with your face print. Is this a revolution in the technological world or is there a hidden cost that could be at stake? Apple's new iPhone X can be unlocked when its user simply looks at it. Rather than a password which you set it yourself, Face-ID is a form of biometric authentication feature which would allow users to lock and unlock their phones using True-Depth camera. This new feature has created clank and is getting popular among the young crowd. As the technology becomes more widespread, there are growing fears that it will erode privacy and be misused by bad actors.

On the other hand, as this technology becomes more pervasive in society, we are likely to see an increased variety of use of biometric authentication, where unlocking a phone is the underpinning and soon, starting a car, unlocking your house door, or even making a payment could be done through nothing more than looking into a camera. It is going to add an extra layer of security to some of the most valuable items we own, making them even more difficult to snip.

In this issue of Court Uncourt, our lawyers will elaborate a broad range of legal matters including Legal Issues pertaining biometric authentication, Divorce law in the UAE, Trade Secrets, Ajman Free Zone company set up and many more. Through this information outlet, we intend to keep our readers updated on the latest legal developments around the world. Thank you, and we hope you have an insightful read of this issue of Court Uncourt.
