Cyst Nematodes Nato Science Series A:

Cyst Nematodes F. Lamberti, C.E. Taylor, 2012-12-06 The cyst nematodes are a major group of plant pathogens of economic importance in many countries throughout the world. Considerable yield losses have been attributed to cyst nematodes attacking potatoes, sugar beet, soybean, and cereals. Because of the protective cyst that is formed which encloses the eggs, they pose special problems in their control and also in preventing their distribution in soil from infested areas. There has been much research on many aspects of the biology of cyst nematodes and the large number of publications are testimony to their importance as crop pests and of the interest of nematologists in the group. Nevertheless, they continue to pose problems because of the complexity of their phylogeny and taxonomy and there is still much to be investigated on their biology, particularly with those aspects which relate to improving the effectiveness of control. In many respects, the biology of the various cyst nematode species is similar, although with variations due to different interactions with hosts and geographical location. Thus, research on any one species has general applicability and this is particularly so with regard to evaluation of control measures or to the methodology of soil sampling for the assessment of populations prior to growing crops. The

Cyst Nematodes S.B. Sharma, 2013-03-14 When Franklin published her book on cyst nematodes in 1951, the cyst nematodes were already known as serious pests of brassicas, cereals, potatoes, and sugar beets. However, at that time, this group of nematode with about 12 species was considered to be largely temperate in distribution. Now, a total of 105 species, including those that are considered as synonyms or species inquirende by some or all within six genera of cyst nematodes, have been described from temperate, tropical, and subtropical regions, and at least five species are important constraints to crop production in tropical agriculture. The previous impression of localization of cyst nematodes in the temperate region was seemingly an artifact due to a greater concentration of nematologists in the temperate regions. Based on my own experience of working in several Asian and African countries, I believe that many more undescribed species are present in the tropical countries of Asia and Africa and probably in other tropical regions. Most growers, extension workers, and research managers in these regions are still not aware of the possible harm of presence of these nematodes in their agricultural soils. The cyst nematodes are perhaps smaller than the smallest available computer chip, but they are very well programmed to survive and propagate despite severe hardships. These nematodes are very selective in their choice of food; about 50% of known species are parasites of plants, mainly in the families Poaceae and Fabaceae. Effects of Nematodes and Nematicides on Plants,

Ferrarini,Benvenuto Pernis,2013-03-09 The progress in protein and nucleic acid chemistry together with improvements of the previously employed tissue culture techniques have led to the solution of problems such as that of the generation of antibody diversity or of the molecular structure of T and B cell membrane receptor for antigen which had challenged the past generations of immunologists Thanks to this progress an impressive amount of knowledge has been accumulated on certain cell types that were relatively mysterious until recently The B lymphocyte represents a typical example of such a cell With these considerations in mind we have started to organize a NATO summer school on The molecular basis of B cell differentiation and function that had the specific aim of bringing up to date a selected number of young investigators During the course held in Santa Margherita Ligure October 1-11 1985 it became apparent that rather than a formal school we had organized an informal series of Workshops where both the Faculty members and the participants were discussing their own data in addition to reviewing the general progress in the field The deep commitment of everyone to his research subject and the enthusiasm had caused this very successful change in the shape of the course At the end we asked the members of the Faculty and the participants to write a summary of their data and of their point of view on selected subjects
