

ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT

BATTERY

HOW IT WORKS

The battery is made of groups of positive and groups of negative plates separated by insulating grids made of plastic.

All plates are put into an electrolyte solution of sulphuric acid and distilled water inside a plastic case. The battery is given an electrical charge by connecting an external current source to the terminals. The current flows from positive to negative. The positive plates change to lead peroxide and the negative change to spongy lead.

The battery keeps the charge in storage until needed. There will be a gradual loss of charge if the battery is not used. Overcharge damage will occur if the battery is kept in storage and not given a charge.

When an electrical circuit is connected to the battery, an electric current flows from the battery. The current flows in the opposite direction to the charging current.

There is a voltage rise in the battery between the discharging and the charging lead wires.

While the battery is charging, current the electrolyte is boiling, a deposit of sulphate on the plates. This causes the electrolyte to become acid and the battery voltage to decrease.

The battery must be given an electrical charge again to return the battery to a full charge. This is done by the generator or alternator while on the move.

The battery is also given a charge from an external source, when the charge condition is less than 70%.

FAULT FINDING

Equipment Needed

- Hydrometer
- 12.5 Amps test instrument 0-50 volts
- D.C. moving coil ohmmeter 0-50 ohms
- Heavy flashlight beam
- An electrolyte, in good condition

TEST 1. Specific Gravity

Use an hydrometer to check the specific gravity of the electrolyte in each cell. The test will not be done correctly unless a distilled water has been added. The amount must be just enough to cover plates.

Temperature correction

For every 10° Celsius less than 10° Celsius, subtract 0.007 from the specific gravity shown on the hydrometer.

For every 10° Celsius more than 10° Celsius, add 0.007 to the specific gravity shown.

For every 10° Fahrenheit less than 60° Fahrenheit, subtract 0.004 from the specific gravity shown.

For every 10° Fahrenheit more than 60° Fahrenheit, add 0.004 to the specific gravity shown.

Example

Specific gravity corrected to 10° Celsius 1.260. For temperature less than 10° Celsius 10° Fahrenheit.

- Full charge 1.260-1.260
- 10% charge 1.250-1.250
- Discharged 1.190-1.190

For temperature more than 10° Celsius 10° Fahrenheit.

- Full charge 1.260+1.260
- 10% charge 1.270+1.270
- Discharged 1.330+1.330

The battery must be given a charge if less than 10% charge is shown. If there is a difference of more than 0.040 between cells, make a note down each of the battery.
