

Chapter 16: Primate Evolution

Primates

- Group of mammals that have
 - Rounded heads and flattened faces
 - Large, complex brains
 - Opposable thumb: thumb can cross the palm to meet the other fingertips
 - Binocular vision: see an object through both eyes at the same time, which helps to perceive depth
 - Arm movement in many directions
 - Flexible joints
- Primates evolved from the same ancestor

Anthropoids: humanlike primates

- Include hominoids, Old and New World monkeys, apes, humans
- New World monkeys
 - live in the rain forests of South and Central America
 - include marmosets and spider monkeys
 - live in trees (arboreal)
 - long, muscular prehensile tail (tail is used to grasp and wrap around branches like another arm or leg)
 - oldest New World monkey fossils are 30-35 million years old

Study Guide and Workbook, an Interactive Approach for Starr and McMillan's Human Biology, Third Edition

Jane B. Taylor, John D. Jackson, 1999 Asks the student to write all answers in this study guide workbook This workbook is interactive because it requires students to do things instead of just read more material All questions are arranged by chapter modules so students may skip unassigned material Each module in the study guide refers to the page numbers of the corresponding module in the text There is a wide variety of questions multiple choice questions tables to be filled in art to be labeled true false questions requiring students to write the correct answer if the statement is false thought provoking conceptual questions boldfaced terms requiring a written definition list of objectives in fill in the blank format and other types of questions

Evolution of the Human Diet Peter S. Ungar, 2006-10-26 We are interested in the evolution of hominin diets for several reasons One is the fundamental concern over our present day eating habits and the consequences of our societal choices such as obesity prevalent in some cultures and starvation in others Another is that humans have learned to feed themselves in extremely varied environments and these adaptations which are fundamentally different from those of our closest biological relatives have to have had historical roots of varying depth The third and the reason why most paleoanthropologists are interested in this question is that a species trophic level and feeding adaptations can have a strong effect on body size locomotion life history strategies geographic range habitat choice and social behavior Diet is key to understanding the ecology and evolution of our distant ancestors and their kin the early hominins A study of the range of foods eaten by our progenitors underscores just how unhealthy many of our diets are today This volume brings together authorities from disparate fields to offer new insights into the diets of our ancestors Paleontologists archaeologists primatologists nutritionists and other researchers all contribute pieces to the puzzle This volume has at its core four main sections Reconstructed diets based on hominin fossils tooth size shape structure wear and chemistry mandibular biomechanics Archaeological evidence of subsistence stone tools and modified bones Models of early hominin diets based on the diets of living primates both human and non human paleoecology and energetics Nutritional analyses and their implications for evolutionary medicine New techniques for gleaned information from fossil teeth bones and stone tools new theories stemming from studies of paleoecology and new models coming from analogy with modern humans and other primates all contribute to our understanding When these approaches are brought together they offer an impressive glimpse into the lives of our distant ancestors The contributions in this volume explore the frontiers of our knowledge in each of these disciplines as they address the knowns the unknowns and the unknowables of the evolution of hominin diets Study Guide

Cerebral Cortex Edward G. Jones, Alan Peters, 2012-12-06 The cerebral cortex especially that part customarily designated neocortex is one of the hallmarks of mammalian evolution and reaches its greatest size relatively speaking and its widest structural diversity in the human brain The evolution of this structure as remarkable for the huge numbers of neurons that it contains as for the range of behaviors that it controls has been of abiding interest to many generations of neuroscientists Yet few theories of cortical evolution have been proposed and none has stood the test of time In particular no theory has been successful in bridging the evolutionary gap that appears to exist between the pallium of non mammalian vertebrates and the neocortex of mammals Undoubtedly this stems in large part from the rapid divergence of non mammalian and mammalian forms and the lack of contemporary species whose telencephalic wall can be seen as having transitional characteristics The monotreme cortex for example is unquestionably mammalian in organization and that of no living reptile comes close to resembling it Yet anatomists such as Ramon y Cajal on examining the finer details of cortical structure were struck by the similarities in neuronal form particularly of the pyramidal cells and their predisposition to laminar alignment shared by representatives of all vertebrate classes
