2. CPT Codes for Lung Volume Test

Lung volume determination is a type of pulmonary function testing (PFT) that measures the amount of air in the lungs at different points in the breathing cycle. This type of testing can be useful in diagnosing and monitoring respiratory conditions such as chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), emphysema, and interstitial lung disease. There are several CPT codes related to lung volume determination. Here's a breakdown of what each code represents:

- 94013: This code is used for multiple-breath helium dilution or nitrogen washout testing, which is a type of lung volume determination test.
- 94726: This code is used for plethysmography, which is a type of lung volume determination test that measures the amount of air in the lungs at the end of a full inhalation.
- 94727: This code is used for gas diffusion testing, which measures how well oxygen and carbon dioxide move between the lungs and the blood. While this test is not specifically a lung volume determination test, it is often performed along with other PFTs to provide a more complete picture of lung function.
