Prokesch, 2013-07-09 The financial crisis of 2008 and the Great Recession caused a crisis of public confidence in business and American style capitalism with its focus on maximizing shareholder value Corporate leaders understood that reform was needed and that they needed to commit themselves to the dual goal of producing benefits for society and their firms bottom lines to creating shared value But the specific actions they could take to bring about this change were less clear This ebook offers some of the freshest thinking today on practical measures that businesses can implement to create shared value Originally published in an online forum hosted by Harvard Business Review it offers valuable advice about how CEOs other senior executives and boards of directors can work together to engage stakeholders in new ways change their companies values build healthier relationships with investors revamp incentive systems to create long term value and develop stronger succession plans The authors of this collection of short articles include current or former CEOs such as Howard Schultz of Starbucks and Dominic Barton of McKinsey Company and an array of prominent academics and other thought leaders including Roger Martin of the University of Toronto Jeffrey Pfeffer of Stanford and Alfred Rappaport of Northwestern Its editors are Raymond Gilmartin the former CEO of Merck and until recently an adjunct professor at Harvard Business School and Steve Prokesch a senior editor at Harvard Business Review who previously worked at the New York Times and BusinessWeek magazine In their introduction they offer five specific recommendations on how CEOs can restore public faith in capitalism HBR Singles provide brief yet potent business ideas in digital form for today s thinking professional

Design after Capitalism Matthew Wizinsky, 2022-03-15 How design can transcend the logics structures and subjectivities of capitalism a framework theoretical grounding and practical principles The designed things experiences and symbols that we use to perceive understand and perform our everyday lives are much more than just props They directly shape how we live In Design after Capitalism Matthew Wizinsky argues that the world of industrial capitalism that gave birth to modern design has been dramatically transformed Design today needs to reorient itself toward deliberate transitions of everyday politics social relations and economies Looking at design through the lens of political economy Wizinsky calls for the field to transcend the logics structures and subjectivities of capitalism to combine design entrepreneurship with social empowerment in order to facilitate new ways of producing those things symbols and experiences that make up everyday life After analyzing the parallel histories of capitalism and design Wizinsky offers some historical examples of anticapitalist noncapitalist and postcapitalist models of design practice These range from the British Arts and Crafts movement of the nineteenth century to contemporary practices of growing furniture or biotextiles and automated forms of production Drawing on insights from sociology philosophy economics political science history environmental and sustainability studies and critical theory fields not usually seen as central to design he lays out core principles for postcapitalist design offers strategies for applying these principles to the three layers of project practice and discipline and provides a set of practical guidelines for designers to use as a starting point The work of postcapitalist design can start today Wizinsky says with the next project Medieval Theology of Work P. Ranft,2016-04-30 This study addresses the need to learn what medieval thinkers had to say about the concept of work by examining the thought of Peter Damian and numerous other religious leaders and groups of the High Middle Ages for evidence of their contributions deepening our understanding of this concept Care and Capitalism Kathleen Lynch,2021-12-09 The logics and ethics of neoliberal capitalism dominate public discourses and politics in the early twenty first century They morally endorse and institutionalize forms of competitive self interest that jettison social justice values and are deeply antithetical to love care and solidarity But capitalism is neither invincible nor inevitable While people are self interested they are not purely self interested they are bound affectively and morally to others even to unknown others The cares loves and solidarity relationships within which people are engaged give them direction and purpose in their daily lives They constitute cultural residuals of hope that stand ready to move humanity beyond a narrow capitalism centric set of values In this instructive and inspiring book Kathleen Lynch sets out to reclaim the language of love care and solidarity both intellectually and politically and to place it at the heart of contemporary discourse Her goal is to help unseat capital at the gravitational centre of meaning making and value thereby helping to create logics and ethical priorities for politics that are led by care love and solidarity The Smart City and the Co-creation of Value Nobuyuki Tokoro,2015-11-11 The original point that differentiates this text from otherwise similar texts is that it looks at the building of smart cities from the viewpoint of an interchange of knowledge among companies in different industries or Ba as shared context in motion and emphasizes that the resulting value becomes a source of new corporate competitive advantage In recent years numerous publications have appeared that analyze smart cities from various perspectives including urban planning and administration network theory and innovation However few are academic texts that approach the subject from the viewpoint of corporate competitive advantage against a theoretical background in management studies as this one does This book is the first full scale academic work to analyze smart cities from the viewpoint of corporate competitive advantage Research into corporate competitive advantage includes the positioning and the resource based views with the former focusing on companies external environment and the latter on their internal resources Although these theories foci of attention necessarily differ they both developed as tools for analyzing companies relative merits and their chances of succeeding in the marketplace and they take the common premise that competitive advantage is built through competition among companies In contrast this book sees corporate competitive advantage as arising not through competition but through co creation among companies It differs in its approach from existing theories in thinking that emphasizing co creation over competition enables an analysis that better describes actual conditions when considering smart cities and corporate competitive advantage Put another way when new values arise from attempts to exchange and fuse knowledge expertise and other factors at the ba where companies from different industries collaborate these values are surely brought about through co creation among companies Another point regarding this book s original perspective on competitive advantage is its emphasis on the relationship between the creation of social value and competitive advantage The question of the extent to which socially useful values can be created in the markets of the 21st century is closely linked to corporate competitive advantage The issues of building smart cities and corporate competitive advantage are themes that this perspective can firmly grasp This book intends to take up three different projects from among the smart city building developments taking shape in Japan and undertake case studies based on the theoretical framework outlined above The central themes will analyze the mechanism of co creation among companies and the relationship of created value to competitive advantage This analysis aims to demonstrate one model relating to corporate competitive advantage in the 21st century
