Assignment 10 - Cell Communication: Theory, Models

1. What is a signal transduction pathway? Give an example.

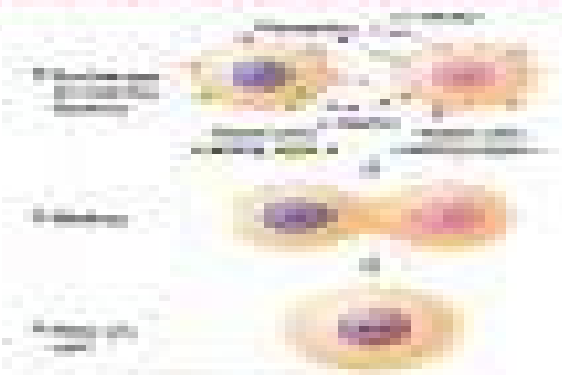

A signal transduction pathway is a series of events that starts with a signal (ligand) binding to a receptor, which then triggers a cascade of intracellular events, ultimately leading to a cellular response.

Example: A signal transduction pathway for a growth factor receptor (EGFR) involves the binding of a growth factor (ligand) to the extracellular domain of the receptor, which then triggers the activation of the intracellular domain. This leads to the recruitment of various signaling molecules, including Ras, Raf, and MEK, which ultimately lead to the activation of ERK. The activated ERK then enters the nucleus and phosphorylates various transcription factors, leading to the expression of genes involved in cell growth and proliferation.

2. What three general functions are an example of a signal transduction pathway?

Signal transduction pathways are involved in various cellular processes, including cell growth, differentiation, and survival. Three general functions are: 1) Cell growth: Signaling pathways regulate the cell cycle and cell division. 2) Differentiation: Signaling pathways control the expression of genes that determine cell fate. 3) Survival: Signaling pathways regulate the expression of genes that control cell survival and apoptosis.
