Take-Aways

- The data in the “data crush” comes from “mobility, virtual living, digital commerce, online entertainment, cloud computing and Big Data.”
- Four “drivers” stimulate data production: “pervasiveness, connectedness, data enablement and context.”
- Smartphones and their apps – 25 billion apps have been downloaded from Apple alone – create and consume vast amounts of data.
- In the future, machines will produce the majority of mobile data traffic, not humans.
- Social media’s revolution in communications will define society’s evolution.
- The data crush will replace the traditional business infrastructure with outsourcing.
- Outsource any process that doesn’t differentiate your firm or that is cheaper outside.
- Outsourcing forms include “cloud computing, outcomes as a service, cloudification, contextification, application” and “thingification.”
- Focus on your firm’s sources of structured and “unstructured” data.
- Imperative big data strategies include: Mobilize everything, eliminate paper, automate, use social networks, mine data blocks and focus on cloud solutions.

human's ability to examine let alone absorb it. Data sets are increasingly complex and this potentially increases the problems associated with such concerns as missing information and other quality concerns, data heterogeneity and differing data formats. The nation's ability to make use of data depends heavily on the availability of a workforce that is properly trained and ready to tackle high need areas. Training students to be capable in exploiting big data requires experience with statistical analysis, machine learning and computational infrastructure that permits the real problems associated with massive data to be revealed and ultimately addressed. Analysis of big data requires cross disciplinary skills including the ability to make modeling decisions while balancing trade offs between optimization and approximation all while being attentive to useful metrics and system robustness. To develop those skills in students it is important to identify whom to teach that is the educational background, experience and characteristics of a prospective data science student, what to teach that is the technical and practical content that should be taught to the student and how to teach that is the structure and organization of a data science program.

Training Students to Extract Value from Big Data summarizes a workshop convened in April 2014 by the National Research Council's Committee on Applied and Theoretical Statistics to explore how best to train students to use big data. The workshop explored the need for training and curricula and coursework that should be included. One impetus for the workshop was the current fragmented view of what is meant by analysis of big data, data analytics or data science. New graduate programs are introduced regularly and they have their own notions of what is meant by those terms and most important of what students need to know to be proficient in data intensive work. This report provides a variety of perspectives about those elements and about their integration into courses and curricula.
