Digital Sensations Space Identity And Embodiment In Virtual Reality:

Digital Sensations Ken Hillis, 1999 Virtual reality is a technological reproduction of the process of perceiving the real yet that process is filtered through the social realities and embedded cultural assumptions about human bodies and space held by the technology's creators Digital Sensations looks closely at how the lived world is affected by representational forms generated by communication technologies especially digital and optical virtual technologies Through critical histories of the technologies of vision light space and embodiment Ken Hillis traces the often contradictory intellectual and metaphysical impulses behind the Western transcendental wish to achieve an ever more perfect copy of the real He advocates that current and proposed virtual technologies reflect a Western desire to escape the body Because virtual technologies are new these histories also address unintended and underconsidered consequences flowing from their rapid dissemination such as commodification and the alienation of new forms of surveillance Book cover

Human Migration to Space Elizabeth Song Lockard, 2014-05-13 Human migration to space will be the most profound catalyst for evolution in the history of humankind yet this has had little impact on determining our strategies for this next phase of exploration Habitation in space will require extensive technological interfaces between humans and their alien surroundings and how they are deployed will critically inform the processes of adaptation As humans begin to spend longer durations in space eventually establishing permanent outposts on other planets the scope of technological design considerations must expand beyond the meager requirements for survival to include issues not only of comfort and well being but also of engagement and negotiation with the new planetary environment that will be crucial to our longevity beyond Earth Approaching this question from an interdisciplinary approach this dissertation explores how the impact of interior space architecture can meet both the physical and psychological needs of future space colonists and set the stage for humankind to thrive and grow while setting down new roots beyond Earth
