Abstract: This manuscript deals with the problematic question of how students' critical reflection is manifested when reflecting on their experiences of learning critical thinking in higher education. Critical reflection is understood as the fusion of personal experience with new knowledge and study content, leading to a new understanding and a new sense of the meaning of oneself, one's learning, studies, and phenomena in the wider environment. A qualitative research method was chosen to reveal the extent of critical reflection. Sixteen students participated in the research: aged 19–49 at the time of the research, from six higher education institutions, representing eight fields of study. A semi-structured interview was chosen for the research and the qualitative content analysis method for the research data analysis, allowing for valid conclusions upon an objective and systematic review of the transcribed interview text. The findings show that in reflections on the critical thinking teaching and learning experiences, students emphasize the process of interaction with others and interaction with themselves, focusing not on the external object but rather on the subject—the thinking person—and their relation to their own thinking. In reflection on teaching and learning, students emphasize applying theoretical knowledge in practice, modelled by the teacher.

1. Introduction

Globalisation, economic competition, technological, labour market and demographic changes, exhaustible natural resources, global warming and other similar processes are placing new demands on the usual pattern of social life [1]. A sustainable existence and the survival of our world requires a qualitative change between human needs and economic, social and environmental development. Therefore, sustainability literacy becomes a critical issue in modern society. This concept encompasses the body of knowledge and skills, the uptake of which changes our attitudes and behaviour in everyday life, at work and in the broader social environment. Sustainability literacy is a personal and global pursuit to create well-being for society and appropriately address and manage challenges that may threaten human existence [2]. Sustainability is not merely a sounding political postulate or a trendy socioeconomic slogan. It is one of the components of social responsibility to which we are all committed. To ensure that such vital concepts as ‘sustainability’, ‘social responsibility’ and ‘sustainability literacy’ do not remain plain slogans and/or become tools for manipulation, it is necessary to teach and learn to think critically about both one's attitudes and actions and those of others, as well as about social phenomena and general societal trends. The ability to think critically contributes to developing sustainability skills, which are desirable and seen as a core competency in the same way that reading and writing skills are [3]. Critical thinkers can learn from their practice, rethink it, and continuously improve their performance to achieve personal progress and success, but also the success of others, which

Guthrie, Maritza Torres, 2019-12-01 In an era of constant connection it can be challenging to prioritize time for reflection Taking time to think can feel like a luxury or even a waste time People facilitating complex leadership processes may feel the least able to pause and reflect However it is through intentional reflection that we make meaning of experiences connect ideas question assumptions and generate innovative possibilities By taking time to reflect individually and with others learners can see the full picture of an experience understand their thought processes and enhance their capacity for leadership Beyond individual reflection by engaging in reflection on social issues with others leaders can be empowered and enabled to create positive changes This book is a clarion call for educators and learners to make reflection a central priority Reflection the process of making meaning of experience and leadership a relational process for affecting change are enhanced by one another Together they strengthen the potential for leadership learning through experience This book addresses challenges for reflection in leadership learning while also connecting it to timely topics It begins with connections between reflection and leadership and then introduces a framework for reflection in leadership learning Reflection is a powerful strategy curricular and co curricular learning for instruction and assessment reflection in leadership learning can benefit from both intentional framing and feedback As socially constructed concepts both reflection and leadership have historically lacked clarity to add to the confusion critical reflection is often interchanged with reflection This book introduces a continuum of critical reflection in leadership learning In order to facilitate reflection in leadership learning educators must engage in the inner work of becoming reflective educators Finally in the face of complex social challenges reflection leadership mindfulness and resilience are juxtaposed in order to highlight how these concepts are reliant upon one another Reflection in leadership learning is essential for anyone who wants to develop their capacity for leadership When faced with complex social issues and challenges at a global scale the only way to make progress is through collective action that results from critical reflection To develop more resilient and mindful learners who can adapt to changing circumstances educators must center reflection in leadership learning as a philosophy pedagogy outcome and strategy This book provides a balance of theory and practice to empower and enable educators to engage in reflective leadership learning

KM SANGHA MITRA, PREFACE Education has always been more than the transfer of knowledge it is the foundation upon which societies are shaped cultures are preserved and futures are imagined In the twenty first century however education stands at a profound crossroads On one side lies the wisdom of tradition timeless philosophies community practices and cultural legacies that have nurtured human learning for centuries On the other side lies the call of innovation digital technologies global interconnectivity and new scientific understandings of how people learn The challenge before educators policymakers and learners today is not to choose between the two but to bridge them in meaningful ways

This book Transformative Pedagogy Bridging Tradition and Innovation in Education emerges from the conviction that education must evolve to remain relevant in an era of rapid change while staying deeply rooted in the values and practices that have sustained human growth through history. It seeks to offer a comprehensive exploration of how transformative pedagogy can provide that bridge honouring the cultural wisdom of the past embracing the technological and social innovations of the present and preparing learners for an uncertain but promising future. Across twelve chapters the book travels through foundational ideas historical traditions and philosophical insights before turning toward the contemporary realities of technology integration inclusivity curriculum innovation and assessment reforms. It highlights the role of teachers as mentors and facilitators the centrality of student agency and the often overlooked emotional and social dimensions of learning. Global case studies from Finland's student centric classrooms to South Korea's AI enhanced learning demonstrate that transformative pedagogy is not a theoretical aspiration but a lived reality in many contexts. While the book speaks to educators researchers and policymakers it is also intended for students parents and community leaders who share responsibility for shaping education. Each chapter combines conceptual clarity with practical illustrations making it both intellectually rigorous and applicable to real world educational challenges. I owe a debt of gratitude to countless teachers scholars and learners whose insights inspired the ideas presented here. This book is not a conclusion but an invitation to dialogue to reflect and to act. Education after all is never static it is a dynamic process of becoming. Exploring Art for Perspective Transformation Alexis Kokkos, 2021-05-12 We live in a socio cultural reality which is dominated by an entrepreneurial and instrumental rationality as well as by a discriminative and populist mentality Questioning the validity of taken for granted sovereign perspectives is thus of vital importance Our contact with art can serve as a pathway through which we might be empowered to identify false life values and develop the disposition and ability to challenge them The learning potential of aesthetic experience is however barely exploited within educational systems In addition although major scholars have contributed to a deeper understanding of the liberating dimension of processing important artworks there has been surprisingly little discussion in the relevant literature focusing on educational practice Exploring Art for Perspective Transformation provides a comprehensive analysis and synthesis of theoretical views pertaining to the emancipatory process of exploring art Moreover it presents the educational method Transformative Learning through Aesthetic Experience TLAE with reference to particular examples of implementation TLAE is addressed to adult educators and school teachers regardless of the subject they teach and their theoretical background on aesthetics It involves engaging learners in exploring works from fine arts literature theatre cinema and music with a view to promoting critical reflection on one s potentially problematic perspectives
