Designing The Urban Future Smart Cities:

Designing the Urban Future Scientific American Editors, 2014-03-31 We expect a lot from our technology More and more products are created not only to perform multiple complex functions but also to react to stimuli patterns and information in a way that solves problems Cars are being designed with systems that can detect a collision and automatically apply the brakes Nest's thermostat learns your schedule and programs itself Our phones are smart Our TVs are smart Since upping the ante is kind of our thing as a species smart cities were the next logical step in trying to create a better brighter more sustainable and economically sound future In this eBook Designing the Urban Future Smart Cities we take a good look this relatively new concept starting with Section 1 Cities of the Future which tackles what makes a city smart In broad terms smart cities encourage sustainable economic development and promote a high quality of life and several stories elaborate on the trend toward urbanization and the qualities needed for a city to survive and thrive Two articles by David Biello examine issues of sustainability in both new and existing cities In Street Talk Michael Easter and Gary Stix ask urban leaders to name the top innovation would make any city more livable Section 2 Drivers Innovation and Creativity delves into how cities can and do make the most use of their best resource human capital Carlo Ratti and Anthony Townsend argue that people and their creativity will drive development in The Social Nexus Section 3 looks at readying cities for climate change including a piece entitled Chicago Goes Green which examines Chicago's forward thinking plan to eliminate a significant amount of its greenhouse gas emissions in the coming years In the same vein the Section 4 covers efficient buildings and opens with two pieces that discuss the pros and cons of LEED certification respectively In Castles in the Air Mark Lamster analyzes the green rebirth of the skyscraper and why building of these behemoths has increased in the post 9 11 world Subsequent sections break down other characteristics of smart cities making power more renewable transportation more sustainable and water cleaner The last section tackles urban public health and one piece details the use of a program called EpiSims to answer the question What if smallpox struck Portland Oregon In short while the definition of smart city might still be murky the purpose is clear If we want to address ongoing issues of climate change and water shortages if we want to create more livable cities for all classes of people if we want to encourage sustainable economic and social development then making cities smarter IS the smartest thing we can do

Urban Futures Mark Burry, 2020-09-01 Given the rapid evolution of concepts such as smart cities who are the architects riding the wave of new possibilities for urban design How do contemporary agencies find pathways to understand the challenges and opportunities presented by evolving urban technology and how does architecture engage with the expanding pool of associated disciplines How should schools of architecture and urban design engage with radical digitalised urbanism This issue of AD claims that this is contested territory The two dimensionality of planners urban construct is as limited as engineers predilection to zero in and solve problems Urban Futures contends that society needs a much broader professional brush than has been applied in the past interdisciplinary urban design professionals who can reach across the philosophy and mundanity of urban existence with a creative eye The issue identifies a selection of internally resourceful visionaries who combine sociology geography logistics and systems theory with the practical realities and challenges of mobility sustainable materials food water and energy supply and waste disposal Crucially they seek to ensure better urban futures and a civil and convivial urban experience for all city dwellers Contributors Refik Anadol Philip Belesky Shajay Bhooshan Jane Burry and Marcus White Thomas Daniell Vicente Guallart Shan He Wanyu He Dan Hill Justyna Karakiewicz Tom Kvan Areti Markopoulou Ed Parham Carlo Ratti Ferran Sagarra and Bige Tuner Featured architects Arup Digital Studio Guallart Architects Space10 Space Syntax UNStudio and XKool Technology
