Psychological Injuries William J. Koch, 2006 Human emotional suffering has been studied for centuries but the significance of psychological injuries within legal contexts has only recently been recognized As the public becomes increasingly aware of the ways in which mental health affects physical and financial well being psychological injuries comprise a rapidly growing set of personal injury insurance claims Although the diverse range of problems that people claim to suffer from are serious and often genuine the largely subjective and unobservable nature of psychological conditions has led to much skepticism about the authenticity of psychological injury claims Improved assessment methods and research on the economic and physical health consequences of psychological distress has resulted in exponential growth in the litigation related to such conditions Integrating the history of psychological injuries both from legal and mental health perspectives this book offers compelling discussions of relevant statutory and case law Focussing especially on posttraumatic stress disorder it addresses the current status and empirical limitations of forensic assessments of psychological injuries and alerts readers to common vulnerabilities in expert evidence from mental health professionals In addition it also uses the latest empirical research to provide the best forensic methods for assessing both clinical conditions such as posttraumatic stress disorder and for alternative explanations such as malingering The authors offer state of the art information on early intervention psychological therapies and pharmaceutical treatments for posttraumatic stress disorder and stimulating suggestions for further research into this complex phenomenon A comprehensive guide to psychological injuries this book will be an indispensable resource for all mental health practitioners researchers and legal professionals who work with psychological injuries

Exploratory Causal Analysis with Time Series Data James M. McCracken, 2022-06-01 Many scientific disciplines rely on observational data of systems for which it is difficult or impossible to implement controlled experiments Data analysis techniques are required for identifying causal information and relationships directly from such observational data This need has led to the development of many different time series causality approaches and tools including transfer entropy convergent cross mapping CCM and Granger causality statistics A practicing analyst can explore the literature to find many proposals for identifying drivers and causal connections in time series data sets Exploratory causal analysis ECA provides a framework for exploring potential causal structures in time series data sets and is characterized by a myopic goal to determine which data series from a given set of series might be seen as the primary driver In this work ECA is used on several synthetic and empirical data sets and it is found that all of the tested time series causality tools agree with each other and intuitive notions of causality for many simple systems but can provide conflicting causal inferences for more complicated systems It is proposed that such disagreements between different time series causality tools during ECA might provide deeper insight into the data than could be found otherwise

Development and Causality Gerald Young, 2011-06-24 This book sets forth a new model of development from a causal perspective As this is an area vital to several disciplines It has been written at multiple levels and for multiple audiences It is based on the work of Piaget and Neo Piagetians but also covers other major models in development It has elements that make it attractive as a teaching text but it is especially research focused It has clinical applications It presents many new ideas and models consistent with the existing literature which is reviewed extensively Students researchers and practitioners should find it useful The models presented in the present work build on models introduced in prior publications e g Young 1990a 1990b 1997
