

Computer Programming 1 Laboratory Manual (Using Java)

SECTION 2: Algorithms

SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES

At the end of the laboratory exercises students can

- Distinguish between pseudo code and flowchart
- Develop a pseudo code to present the algorithm of a program; and
- Draw a flowchart to illustrate an algorithm

LEARNING CONTENT

Algorithms can be expressed in pseudo code or flowchart. A pseudo code is a natural human readable description of what a computer program does, expressed in natural language rather than programming language. It aims to help programmers by providing a template as bases for writing the codes using a specific programming language.

On the other hand, flowchart is a visual representation of an algorithm. It uses shapes or symbols to represent the sequence of movements or actions of certain components to achieve a certain objective. These shapes or symbols are connected with one another using arrows, which show the flow of the process.
