Energy Security in Asia and Eurasia Mike M. Mochizuki,Deepa M. Ollapally,2016-12-01

Many states appear to have strong sentiment on energy security and energy transit vulnerability. Some analysts see the rapidly increasing demand for energy and competition for energy resources leading to nationalistic energy policies. Others argue that global trends with efficient energy markets and growing options on renewables suggest more relaxed energy outlooks. This book focuses on Asia where global demand for energy is now concentrated in the aspiring and rising powers of the region: China, India, Japan, and South Korea, and also recognises the importance of Russia as a growing energy supplier. Contributions by experts in the field provide detailed and parallel case studies. Shedding light on the ongoing debate in the literature regarding energy outlooks of major Asian states, they analyse whether energy policies are expected to evolve along market-oriented cooperative lines or more competitive and even destructive mercantile nationalist lines. The book argues that states are not unitary actors even in the key energy security arena and there are competing and contrasting viewpoints in Asian states on energy security. It suggests that domestic debates structure thinking on energy security, making energy policy more contingent than assumed by purely market or geopolitical logics. Providing a strong contribution to comparative energy security studies, the book fills an important gap in the literature on energy and national security and offers a basis for conducting further inter-state interactive analysis. It will be of interest to researchers on Asian Studies, energy politics, and international relations.

Governance and Politics of China Tony Saich, 2024-10-17 The success or failure of China's development will impact not only its own citizens but also those of the world. China is widely recognized as a global actor on the world stage and no global challenge can be resolved without its participation. It is important to understand how the country is ruled and what its policy priorities are. Can China move to a more market-based economy while controlling environmental degradation? Can it integrate hundreds of millions of new migrants into the urban landscape? The tensions between communist and capitalist identities continue to divide society as China searches for a path to modernization. In this revised fifth edition and essential guide to the subject, Tony Saich delivers a thorough introduction to all aspects of politics and governance in post-Mao China, taking full account of the changes of the 20th Party Congress and the 13th National People's Congress as well as the situation in Hong Kong and current debates in Chinese society.

Language, Education and Uyghur Identity in Urban Xinjiang Joanne Smith Finley, Xiaowei Zang, 2015-10-30 As the regional lingua franca, the Uyghur language long underpinned Uyghur national identity in Xinjiang. However, since the bilingual education policy was introduced in 2002, Chinese has been rapidly institutionalised as the sole medium of instruction in the region's institutes of education. As a result, studies of the bilingual and indeed multi-lingual Uyghur urban youth have emerged as a major new research trend. This book explores the relationship between language, education, and identity among the urban Uyghurs of contemporary Xinjiang. It considers ways in which Uyghur urban youth identities began to evolve in response to the state imposition of bilingual education. Starting by defining the notion of ethnic identity, the book explores the processes involved in the formation and development of personal and group identities, considers why ethnic boundaries are constructed between groups and questions how ethnic identity is expressed in social cultural and religious practice Against this background contributors adopt a special focus on the relationship between language use education and ethnic identity development As a study of ethnicity in China this book will be of huge interest to students and scholars of Chinese culture and society Asian ethnicity cultural anthropology sociolinguistics and Asian education Temporary Work, Agencies and Unfree Labour Judy Fudge, Kendra Strauss, 2013-08-29 Unfree labor has not disappeared from advanced capitalist economies In this sense the debates among and between Marxist and orthodox economic historians about the incompatibility of capitalism and unfree labor are moot the International Labour Organisation has identified forced coerced and unfree labor as a contemporary issue of global concern Previously hidden forms of unfree labor have emerged in parallel with several other well documented trends affecting labor conditions rights and modes of regulation These evolving types of unfree labor include the increasing normalization of contingent work and by extension the undermining of the standard contract of employment and an increase in labor intermediation The normative political and numerical rise of temporary employment agencies in many countries in the last three decades is indicative of these trends It is in the context of this rapidly changing landscape that this book consolidates and expands on research designed to understand new institutions for work in the global era This edited collection provides a theoretical and empirical exploration of the links between unfree labor intermediation and modes of regulation with particular focus on the evolving institutional forms and political economic contexts that have been implicated in and shaped by the ascendancy of temp agencies What is distinctive about this collection is this bi focal lens it makes a substantial theoretical contribution by linking disparate literatures on and debates about the co evolution of contingent work and unfree labor new forms of labor intermediation and different regulatory approaches but it further lays the foundation for this theory in a series of empirically rich and geographically diverse case studies This integrative approach is grounded in a cross national comparative framework using this approach as the basis for assessing how and to what extent temporary agency work can be considered unfree wage labor Beyond Strategies Priya Singh, 2014 Papers presented at the International Seminar on Beyond Strategies Cultural Dynamics in Asian Connection held at Kolkata in March 2013
