Reinterpreting Sub-Saharan Cities through the Concept of Adaptive Capacity Liana Ricci,2015-12-30 This book explores whether and how a reinterpretation of Sub Saharan cities through the concept of adaptive capacity could bridge this distance and contribute to a new understanding of the contemporary city The research contributes to improved knowledge of urban and environmental planning and of the dynamics of development and environmental management in peri urban areas of Dar es Salaam This knowledge highlights the limits of certain common generalizations on the character of peri urban areas Moreover the research provides methodological contribution derived from considerations on the strengths and weakness of tools and methods for investigating adaptive capacity and for environmental management in the city of Dar es Salaam Finally it highlights controversial issues and possible research paths related to the relationship between adaptive capacity and urban and environmental planning Street Archives and City Life Emily Callaci,2017-10-24 In Street Archives and City Life

Emily Callaci maps a new terrain of political and cultural production in mid to late twentieth century Tanzanian urban landscapes. While the postcolonial Tanzanian ruling party TANU adopted a policy of rural socialism known as Ujamaa between 1967 and 1985, an influx of youth migrants to the city of Dar es Salaam generated innovative forms of urbanism through the production and circulation of what Callaci calls street archives. These urban intellectuals neither supported nor contested the ruling party's anti-city philosophy; rather, they navigated the complexities of inhabiting unplanned African cities during economic crisis and social transformation through various forms of popular texts that included women's Christian advice literature, newspaper columns, self-published pulp fiction novellas, and song lyrics. Through these textual networks, Callaci shows how youth migrants and urban intellectuals in Dar es Salaam fashioned a collective ethos of postcolonial African citizenship. This spirit ushered in a revolution rooted in the city and its networks: an urban revolution that arose in spite of the nation state's pro-rural ideology.

Mega-Urbanization in the Global South Ayona Datta, Abdul

Shaban, 2016-11-03. The global south is entering an Urban Age where, for the first time in history, more people will be living in cities than in the countryside. The logics of this prediction have a dominant framing: rapid urbanization, uncontrolled migration, resource depletion, severe fuel shortages, and the breakdown of law and order. We are told that we must be prepared. The solution is simple, they say: Mega urbanization is an opportunity for economic growth and prosperity. Therefore, we must build big, build new, and build fast. With contributions from an international range of established and emerging scholars drawing upon real-world examples, Mega Urbanization in the Global South is the first to use the lens of speed to examine the postcolonial urban revolution. From the mega urbanization of Lusaka to the production of satellite cities in Jakarta to new cities built from scratch in Masdar, Songdo, and Rajarhat, this book argues that speed is now the persistent feature of a range of utopian visions that seek to expedite the production of new cities. These fast cities are the enduring images of postcolonial urbanism which bypass actually existing urbanisms through new power-knowledge coalitions of producing, knowing, and governing the city. The book explores three main themes. Part I examines fast cities as new urban utopias which propagate the illusion that they are quick-fix, sustainable solutions to insulate us from future crises. Part II discusses the role of the entrepreneurial state that, despite its neoliberalisation, is playing a key role in shaping mega urbanization through laws, policies, and brute force. Part III finally delves into how fast cities built by entrepreneurial states actually materialise at the scale of regional urbanization rather than as metropolitan growth. This book explores the contradictions between intended and unintended outcomes of fast cities and points to their fault lines between state sovereignty, capital accumulation, and citizenship. It concludes with a vision and manifesto for slow and decelerated urbanism. This timely and original book presents urban scholars with the theoretical, empirical, and methodological challenges of mega urbanization in the global south, as well as highlighting new theoretical agendas and empirical analyses that these new forms of city-making bring to the fore.

Urban Planning in a World of Informal Politics Chandan Deuskar, 2022-08-30. In many rapidly urbanizing countries, in Africa Asia and Latin America local politics undermines the effectiveness of urban planning Politicians have incentives to ignore formal urban plans and sideline planners and instead provide urban land and services through informal channels in order to cultivate political constituencies a form of what political scientists refer to as clientelism This results in inequitable and environmentally damaging patterns of urban growth in some of the largest and most rapidly urbanizing countries in the world The technocratic planning solutions often advocated by governments and international development organizations are not enough To overcome this problem urban planners must understand and adapt to the complex politics of urban informality In this book Chandan Deuskar explores how politicians in developing democracies provide urban land and services to the urban poor in exchange for their political support demonstrates how this impacts urban growth and suggests innovative and practical ways in which urban planners can try to be more effective in this challenging political context He draws on literature from multiple disciplines urban planning political science sociology anthropology and others statistical analysis of global data on urbanization and an in depth case study of urban Ghana Urban planners and international development experts working in the Global South as well as researchers educators and students of global urbanization will find Urban Planning in a World of Informal Politics informative and thought provoking

Health in Megacities and Urban Areas
 Alexander Krämer, Mobarak Hossain Khan, Frauke Kraas, 2011-07-06

Diverse driving forces processes and actors are responsible for different trends in the development of megacities and large urban areas Under the dynamics of global change megacities are themselves changing On the one hand they are prone to increasing socio economic vulnerability due to pronounced poverty socio spatial and political fragmentation sometimes with extreme forms of segregation disparities and conflicts On the other hand megacities offer positive potential for global transformation e g minimisation of space consumption highly effective use of resources efficient disaster prevention and health care options if good strategies were developed At present in many megacities and urban areas of the developing world and the emerging economies the quality of life is eroding Most of the megacities have grown to unprecedented size and the pace of urbanisation has far exceeded the growth of the necessary infrastructure and services As a result an increasing number of urban dwellers are left without access to basic amenities like clean drinking water fresh air and safe food Additionally social inequalities lead to subsequent and significant intra urban health inequalities and unbalanced disease burdens that can trigger conflict and violence between subpopulations The guiding idea of our book lies in a multi and interdisciplinary approach to the complex topic of megacities and urban health that can only be adequately understood when different disciplines share their knowledge and methodological tools to work together We hope that the book will allow readersto deepen their understanding of the complex dynamics of urban and megacity populations through the lens of public health geographical and other research perspectives

El Paso Victor M. Ortíz-González, 2004 A grounded and instructive analysis of the ways globalization affects a border city Every marker of social difference can be easily interpreted in the fashionable language of borderlands and if so as Victor M

Ortiz Gonzalez reveals the practical reality of the border region is often grossly misrepresented and its people woefully served. He argues that amid the tantalizing abstractions generated by the sweeping reconfigurations of globalization, people in cities like El Paso and Ciudad Juarez on the U.S.-Mexican border are actually living the gritty realities of a new world order. With descriptions of grassroots initiatives to confront the challenges and opportunities that NAFTA represents for the city, El Paso challenges us to acknowledge and address the conceptual and sociopolitical tasks of a world in which abstract representations and nonlocal interests override concrete situations. Ortiz Gonzalez also provides an in-depth analysis of groups such as La Mujer Obrera, Unite El Paso, and the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and their attempts to give local residents and workers more autonomy and power. Balancing ethnographic detail with precise theoretical insights, El Paso offers a compelling case study and a stirring call to understand both the conceptual challenge and the social urgency of the effects of globalization in local settings.
