Narrative as Writing and Literacy Pedagogy for Preservice Elementary Teachers

Nancy A. Wasser, 2021-08-16 I just cannot write or I am not a good writer are familiar complaints from students in academia. Many of them claim they cannot express themselves clearly in written text and their lack of this skill impedes them in their academic career. In this book, Nancy A. Wasser argues that teachers can help solve this when they start viewing writing not as secondary to reading but as the equally important side of the same coin. Those who cannot read will not be able to write. Wasser explains how teaching and regular practicing of writing skills from an early age onwards helps children grow into students who are self-aware of their voices. By employing narrative as a process of learning to write and a way to read, teachers can teach children the art of writing while also making children more aware of their own constructions of narrative. Combining the focus on individual and group expression in writing lessons, students can trace and reflect on their own life transformations through their writing process. Good writers are not born that way but made through effort and practice. Changes in curriculum may not only lead to better expressed citizens but also to more balance between teacher and children voices.

Fostering Imagination in Higher Education Joy Whitton, 2018-04-24 Imagination and creative teaching approaches are increasingly important across all higher education disciplines, not just the arts. Investigating the role of imagination in teaching and learning in non-arts disciplines, this book argues that a lack of clarity about what imagination looks like in higher education impedes teachers in fostering their students' creativity. Fostering Imagination in Higher Education tells four ethnographic stories from physics, history, finance, and pharmaceutical science courses, analytically observing the strategies educators use to encourage their students' imagination and detailing how students experience learning when it is focussed on engaging their imagination. The highly original study is framed by Ricoeur's work on different forms of imagination: reproductive and productive or generative. It links imaginative thinking to cognitive science and philosophy, in particular the work of Clark, Dennett, and Polanyi, and to the mediating role of disciplinary concepts and social/cultural practices. The author's discussion of models, graphs, strategies, and artefacts as tools for taking learners thinking forward has much to offer understandings of pedagogy in higher education. Students in these case studies learned to create themselves as knowledge producers and professionals. It positioned them to experience actively the constructed nature of the knowledge and processes they were learning to use and the continuing potential of knowledge to be remade in the future. This is what makes imaginative thinking elemental to the goals of higher education.
