

NYC DOE Framework for Teaching: Danielson Rubric

	INEFFECTIVE	DEVELOPING	EFFECTIVE	HIGHLY EFFECTIVE
1.1C The teacher displays knowledge of content in the discipline.	In planning and practice, the teacher makes use of content knowledge but seems to view content as a static body of facts. The teacher displays little understanding of how specific knowledge impacts on learning or learning of the students. The teacher displays little concern and interest in the ways of pedagogy that a particular content is amenable to in the learning of the content.	The teacher is familiar with the important concepts in the discipline, but displays a lack of awareness of how these concepts relate to particular content. The teacher understands content as a static body of facts, although such knowledge may be used well in instruction. The teacher's plans and practice reflect a limited range of pedagogy that is amenable to the discipline or to the students.	The teacher displays solid knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to content. The teacher displays some awareness and understanding of how specific content relates to learning. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wider range of effective pedagogy that is amenable to the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.	The teacher displays extensive knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to content and to particular learning. The teacher demonstrates wide understanding of how specific content relates to learning and content placed under scrutiny the link to learning objectives structures their own plans and practice well. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wide range of effective pedagogy that is amenable to the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.
1.2C The teacher understands instructional practices.	Learning activities are poorly aligned with the instructional objectives, do not follow a sequential progression, are not designed to engage students in active intellectual activity and have a monotone, low effectiveness in motivating students to the activities and offer little variety.	Some of the learning activities and materials are aligned with instructional objectives and represent sound instructional challenges, but with no different student handling or strategies. Instructional groups generally support the activities, with some variety. The teacher or unit has a strong visible structure, but the progression of activities is uneven, with only some noticeable time allocations.	Most of the learning activities are aligned with the instructional objectives and follow a sequential progression suitable to groups of students. The learning activities have some visible time allocations, they represent significant instructional challenges, with some differentiation for different groups of students and varied use of instructional groups.	The sequence of learning activities follows a coherent argument, is aligned to instructional goals, and is designed to engage students in high-level cognitive activity. There are appropriate differentiation for individual learners. Instructional groups are varied appropriately with some opportunity for students to lead.
2.1C Creating an environment of respect and support.	Relationships between interactions, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally negative, unproductive, or leave no clear evidence of respect, cultural learning goals, and if students feel there is, students' interactions are characterized by teasing, put-downs, or conflict. The teacher does not deal with all inappropriate behavior.	Some visible time is given to students, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally appropriate, but may reflect occasional inappropriate, disruptive, or disruptive for students' respect, culture, and development and goals. Students rarely demonstrate displays of respect towards. The teacher may begin to respond to all inappropriate behavior with some results. The majority of the time students are seated, occupying neither socially nor conflict.	Visible evidence of interactions is visible and the students go on listening and respect. Such time is given and appropriate to the age, culture, and development needs of the students, with evidence among students are generally polite and respectful, and students exhibit respect for the teacher. The teacher manages successfully to do respectful behavior among students. The majority of the time students are polite, respectful and courteous, though students may be aware when teachers who are taking instructional roles.	Classroom interactions between the teacher and students and among students are highly respectful, reflecting genuine warmth, caring, and sensitivity to students' individuality. Students exhibit respect for the teacher and contribute to high level of civility among all students in the class. The unit is well known to students and all students feel valued and a comfortable feeling and comfortable.
2.2C Managing student behavior.	There appears to be inconsistent standards of conduct, or students in the classroom there is little or no time for monitoring of students for having a self-regulation to students' behavior in comparison and some partial of students display.	Standards of conduct appear to have been established, but their implementation is inconsistent. The teacher tries, with some results, to monitor students' behavior and respond to students' misbehavior.	Standards of behavior are generally appropriate. The teacher monitors student behavior against established standards of conduct. Teacher response to students' misbehavior is consistent, proportionate, and respectful to students and is effective.	Standards of behavior are clearly appropriate. Students take an active role in monitoring their own behavior and for their efforts. Students appear to understand and act on it. Teacher monitoring of student behavior is subtle and persistent. The teacher's response to student misbehavior is sensitive to individual student needs and respects students' dignity.
