

NYC DOE Framework for Teaching: Danielson Rubric

	INEFFECTIVE	DEVELOPING	EFFECTIVE	HIGHLY EFFECTIVE
1.1C The teacher displays knowledge of content in the discipline.	In planning and practice, the teacher makes use of content knowledge but seems to view content as a static body of facts. The teacher displays little understanding of how specific knowledge impacts on students' learning of the content. The teacher displays little concern and interest in the ways of pedagogy that a particular content is made an learning of the content.	The teacher is familiar with the important concepts in the discipline, but displays a lack of a systematic of how these concepts relate to each other. The teacher understands content as a static body of facts, although such knowledge may be used well in practice. The teacher's plans and practice reflect a limited range of pedagogy that a particular content is made an learning of the discipline or to the students.	The teacher displays solid knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to one another. The teacher displays some concern with understanding of how specific knowledge impacts on students' learning of the content. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wider range of effective pedagogy that a particular content is made an learning of the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.	The teacher displays extensive knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to one another and to other disciplines. The teacher demonstrates wide understanding of how specific knowledge impacts and connects to and underpins the links to necessary cognitive structures that must exist in order to learn. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wide range of effective pedagogy that a particular content is made an learning of the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.
1.2C The teacher understands instructional practices.	Learning activities are poorly aligned with the instructional objectives, do not follow a sequential progression, are not designed to engage students in active intellectual activity and have a monotone, low effectiveness in motivating students to take activities and offer variety.	Some of the learning activities and tasks are aligned with instructional objectives and represent real-world cognitive challenges, but with no different student level or an effective instructional group partially appropriate activities, with some variety. The teacher or unit has a strong viable structure, but the progression of tasks is uneven, with only some appropriate time allocations.	Most of the learning activities are aligned with the instructional objectives and follow a sequential progression suitable to groups of students. The learning activities have some with time allocations, they represent a wide range of cognitive challenges, with some differentiation for different groups of students and varied use of instructional groups.	The sequence of learning activities follows a coherent argument, is aligned to instructional goals, and is designed to engage students in high-level cognitive activity. There are appropriate differentiation for individual learners. Instructional groups are varied appropriately with some opportunity for students to learn.
2.1C Creating an environment of respect and support.	Relationships between interactions, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally negative, inappropriate, or less than the best one might expect, cultural learning needs, and if students feel that students' interactions are characterized by teasing, put-downs, or conflict. The teacher does not deal with all inappropriate behavior.	Relationships between interactions, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally appropriate, but may reflect occasional inappropriate, disrespectful, or damaged for students' respect, culture, and development and trust. Students rarely demonstrate disagreement or conflict. The teacher attempts to respond to all inappropriate behavior with some results. The overall effect of the learning environment is neutral, unengaging neither positive nor negative.	Relationships between interactions are friendly and the students go on to learning and respect. Such learning is appropriate to the age, culture, and development needs of the students, with students among students are generally polite and respectful, and students exhibit respect for the teacher. The teacher responds successfully to disrespectful behavior among students. The overall effect of the learning environment is polite, respectful and harmonious, though students may be aware when teachers who are taking informal roles.	Classroom interactions between the teacher and students and among students are highly respectful, reflecting genuine warmth, caring, and sensitivity to students' individuality. Students exhibit respect for the teacher and contribute to high level of civility among all members of the class. The overall effect is an atmosphere where all students feel valued and a comfortable learning environment.
2.2C Managing student behavior.	There appears to be inconsistent standards of conduct, or students behave like as there is little concern for monitoring of students' learning and responses to students' behavior in comparison and some partial of students' dignity.	Standards of conduct appear to have been established, but their implementation is inconsistent. The teacher tries, with some results, to monitor students' behavior and respond to students' misbehavior.	Standards of conduct are generally appropriate. The teacher monitors student behavior against established standards of conduct. Teacher response to students' behavior is consistent, proportionate, and respectful to students and is effective.	Standards of conduct are consistently appropriate. Students take an active role in monitoring their own behavior and for their efforts. Students appear to understand and act on it. Teacher monitoring of student behavior is subtle and persistent. The teacher's response to student misbehavior is sensitive to individual student needs and respects students' dignity.
