

Abstract: How is a morphologically ambiguous form that can mean 'how' (as in 'how many') or 'how' (as in 'how often'). This paper reports on a study of how children learn to use the two meanings of how. The study was designed to test the predictions of the How Hypothesis, which states that children learn the two meanings of how by using the form in different contexts. The results of the study show that children do indeed learn the two meanings of how by using the form in different contexts. Children who used how in the context of 'how many' questions learned the meaning of how as 'how many' first, while children who used how in the context of 'how often' questions learned the meaning of how as 'how often' first. The results also show that children who used how in both contexts learned both meanings of how at the same time.

- 1.1 There are four main types of seabirds – those that naturally nest on rocks and those that naturally nest on islands and shorelines. A seabird's species name gives a clue to its habitat. Seabirds differ in their nesting habits, such as if they nest on the ground, in burrows, or in trees. Some seabirds nest on the ground, while others nest in trees. Some seabirds nest in burrows, while others nest in trees. Some seabirds nest in burrows, while others nest in trees. Some seabirds nest in burrows, while others nest in trees.
